TOWN COUNCIL MEETING

Council Chamber,
July 19th, 1920.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor J. E. Robinson presiding.

The minutes of the last regular and several preceeding meetings were read and confirmed.

Present : Reeve Graham, and Councillors, Roblin, Paul, Lowry, MacGregor.

A communication was read from Mr. E. A. Bond, President of the Napanee Waterworks Co., enclosing a formal offer of the Napanee Water Works Company to sell their plant to the Town of Napanee. An exact copy of the offer will be found on page one of this issue.

Moved by Reeve Graham, and seconded by Coun. Roblin,

Whereas the Council of the Town of Napanee have completed negotiations with the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario for the purchase by the town of the canal and other properties belonging to the said Commission in the Town of Napanee, as per written offer submitted to the Commission, and

Whereas the Council of the Town of Napanee purpose submitting, at an early date, a by-law to the ratepayers of the town, for their approval of said purchase, and

Whereas it is necessary to receive the consent of the Ontario Government to said sale before a by-law may be submitted to the ratepayers, and

Whereas the Town of Napanee is also about to purchase the plant of the Napanee Waterworks Co., and will be submitting a by-law authorizing said purchase to the ratepayers at an early date, and

Whereas it is advisable that both by-laws be submitted to the ratepayers at the same time,

Now, therefore, be it resolved, that the said Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario be urged to secure, as soon as possible, the approval of the Ontario Government to the sale of above mentioned property to the town and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario. Carried.

A by-law was passed appointing Mr. John G. Fennell, tax collector for the year 1920, at a salary of $300.00.

A by-law was passed respecting the payment of taxes. The by-law states that all taxes are payable at the office of the tax collector at par up to and including the 1st day of September. Three per cent. will be charged after that date, and an additional two per cent. will be added on all taxes remaining unpaid after the 1st day of November, making a total of five per cent. in all.

Moved by Reeve Graham, and seconded by Coun. Paul, that the offer of the Waterworks Co. for the sale of the waterworks plant be accepted subject to the ratification of the same by the ratepayers of the town, and that the town solicitor be instructed to draft a by-law and contract to be submitted to the ratepayers, and that Mr. E. A. James, the town's engineer, be consulted in the drafting of said by-law. Carried.

Reeve Graham reported to the council that a new Act had been passed in reference to the construction of Provincial highway roads through towns and villages, and that definite action should be taken in reference to our roadway on Dundas street.

Moved by Reeve Graham, and seconded by Coun. Paul, that the Streets Committee be empowered to take up with Mr. E. A. James the question of the cost of making complete plans and specifications, and probable cost of said plans and specifications of a permanent roadway from the western limits of Dundas street, on Piety Hill, to the eastern limits connecting with the York road and report to council at its next session. Carried.

On motion the town solicitor was asked to draft and submit to the council at its next meeting, a by-law relating to the purchase of the property now owned by the Hydro Electric Power Commission.

The property above referred to is the canal, and all property south of it, and also the lands known as the Joy and Craig sites; also the dam and water privileges.

THE WATERWORKS PLANT

COPY OF OFFER OF SALE BY THE WATERWORKS CO'Y.

Castleton, N. Y., July, 1920.

To the Mayor and Council of the Corporation of the Town of Napanee ;

I am authorized by the Napanee Waterworks Company, hereinafter called The Company, to offer for sale to the Corporation of the Town of Napanee, hereinafter called the Corporation, the entire plant of the company in the Town of Napanee together with all contracts and leases, all the machinery, equipment and tools used in the operation thereof (except goods and articles hereinafter mentioned) for the sum of $70,000.00 made up as follows :

The corporation is to assume the present bonded indebtedness of the company to the extent of $40,000.00, but all accrued interest thereon up to the date of the completion of the purchase is to be borne by the company. The balance of said purchase money, that is to say, $30,000.00, is to be paid by delivering to the company 30 year serial debentures of the corporation payable in current money of Canada of the face value of $30,000.00 bearing interest at six per centum per annum, the principal and interest to be payable in sixty equal half yearly installments, the first of said installments to be due and payable in one half year after the date of the completion of the purchase.

Upon the date of the completion of the purchase the company is to convey to the corporation free from all encumbrances, except the bonded indebtedness of $40,000.00, as of said date, by a good and sufficient conveyance the said plant together with the machinery, equipment, and tools used in the operation thereof (except goods and articles hereinafter mentioned).

All accounts for service paid or payable to said company and taxes are to be adjusted as of the date of the completion of said purchase.

This offer is open for the acceptance of the corporation until the 1st day of November, A. D., 1920, and if accepted the purchase is to be completed on said last mentioned date.

I desire to add as a further term that oil, fuel, iron pipe, and specials, hydrants, gate boxes, corporation and curb cocks, and small service pipes and fittings, not in actual use (and which are suitable for the purposes of the corporation [illegible] included in the foregoing, but will be taken over by the corporation at the invoice price thereof.

NEWS ABOUT CHAUTAUQUA

Father Watt, of London England, has proved such a tremendously popular success that we have decided to make a change in the programme in order that he may speak at night. His lecture is very popular and has many entertainment features in that he uses a good deal of humor, therefore we have decided to have him appear in the evening of the opening day.

Dr. Cauldwell will appear on the afternoon of the third day.

To Help the Home Town

The circuit Chautauqua was devised to make posible a winning fight for the preservation of the "Home Towns" It recognizes the need of the hour, and its programmes are built with a definite constructive purpose. They are intended for a cosmopolitan patronage, aiming to give everyconstantly directing the thought ofthe community to beter things. They strive to bring a mesage of good cheer and optimism, and to make every town a beter town in which to live and do business.

So many home towns are such dull, drab, dismal, doleful places. Do you wonder that young folks want to leave and 'go to the city' As one old lady said, "There's only one week in the year in this town, and that's Chautauqua week Then we set down and wait 51 weeks for Chautauqua to come back." She had not imbibed the full spirit of Chautauqua or she would not have "set down and waited" she would have done something to help brighten up the dull spots, which is Chautauqua's mission to your town.

Read descriptions of some of the talent on page five.

Sale of Chatauqua Tickets

Beginning Monday, July 26th, the following ladies will canvass the town to sell you your Chautauqua season tickets.

Mrs. James Douglas, Mrs. R. F. Hawley, Mrs. Thos. Symington, Mrs. O. S. Reddick, Mrs. W. J. Jewell, Mrs. J. W. Robinson, Miss G. Sproule, Mrs. Alpine Woods, Mrs. A. E. Paul, Mrs. Murney Parks, Mrs. F. L. Hooper, Mrs. (Dr.) Smith, Miss Etna Baker, Mrs. J. E. Robinson, Mrs. E. J. Corkill.

We would ask you to please be ready for them, and not ask them to call again, as it takes considerable time at the best. Have your money ready. Price, including war tax, is $2.75 for adults and $1.35 for children.

Eleven double programmes make up this big seven day event without counting the junior Chautauqua features. The purchase of a season ticket reduces the cost of admission more than one half, giving you the world's best music lectures and entertainment at moving picture prices.

No season tickets will be sold after the Ghautauqua opens.

"It pays to buy a Season Ticket."

A Lot for the Money.

Round the stand of the traveling auctioneer the villagers stood in a crowd. But business was slow.

"What offers for this ancient fiddle?" he inquired pathetically. "Look it over. Notice the blurred finger marks of remorseless time. To the merry notes of this fine old instrument the brocaded dames of fair France may have danced the minuet."

By this time the crowd was becoming interested.

"Ah," continued the auctioneer, "it bears an abrasion — perhaps the touch of fire. Who knows? It may have been the very fiddle on which Nero played while Rome burned. Now, what offers?"

"Fifty cents!"

"It is yours, sir!" replied the auctioneer quickly.

Supply and Demand Govern Price and Profits

The demand for food exceeds the supply, consequently prices are up and producers are assured good profits. The more produced, the larger the returns.

KAISER MOTOR CAR.

Now Used by Chorus Girls In London.

Ballet girls of London's biggest musical success are riding home these nights on cushions meant for the ex-imperial limbs of the ex-kaiser. The most sumptuous car in the world, seized as Hohenzollern property by the British Government at the outbreak of the war, is now owned by Gladys Dillon, revue producer.

Miss Dillon has owned the car for a year, but wouldn't have had it a week if she could have sold it. It came to her from a Norwegian, together with a yacht once raced by the Emperor Wilhelm. Both were bought by the Norwegian at public auction. After trying to pay their upkeep for three years he presented them to Miss Dillon.

The car is so magnificent that nobody will buy it. It seats ten people and can hold fifteen. It has combined dinner and card table in the rear, with seats for seven arranged around it. In the back is a cellarette and an installation whereby lunches can be cooked at short order. The carriage, including the driver's seat, which accommodates three, is in mahogany four inches thick, inlaid with silver in oriental design.

Sunken opaque lights supply the illumination. The floor is parquet oak. Silken curtains conceal the windows, which are protected by sheet glass an inch thick. The engine of the car is 70 horsepower.

On armistice night Miss Dillon ventured to appear in the car at the Criterion restaurant. Hooligans from the east end surrounded it and made such disturbances that a policeman turned in a riot call, and an armed squad had to escort the car back to its garage. Since then the only use to which it has been put has been to convey members of the ballet in Miss Dillon's theatre to their homes when the show was closed, usually late. The entire ballet has been conveyed in three trips.

"The car is a white elephant," said Miss Dillon. "Englishmen won't buy it because it belonged to the kaiser and because they say it is too 'swanky'; Frenchmen won't buy it because of the 70 per cent. duty they would have to pay to get it into France. The only man who can afford to keep the car is an American millionaire, and I am now considering three offers from New York."

English automobile experts who have seen the car pronounce it the most luxurious in the world. It is priced at $15,000.

Jungle Fowls.

The mound-shaped nests of the jungle fowls of Australia, in which the eggs are hatched by the heat of the decomposing vegetation, are sometimes fifteen feet high and 150 feet in circumference. They are believed to be the largest nests made by any creatures.

WAR HERO MURDERED

Irish Official Shot Down by Sinn Feiners.

Commissioner Smyth Was Assassinated In a Dramatic Manner In Exclusive Cork Club by Group of Murderers Who Were Taking "Vengeance" Because He Had Instructed Soldiers to Shoot at Sight..

BELFAST, July 20.—Commissioner Smyth, of the Royal Irish Constabulary, was shot dead in the country club at Cork Saturday night by fourteen armed men, who forced their way past the doorman. Smyth was found by the intruders sitting with friends, one of them District Inspector Craig. Several of the men fired point blank at Commissioner Smyth, who rose, but fell dead while endeavoring to reach the door. Craig was wounded during the fusillade. Col. Smyth was the divisional commissioner for the Royal Irish Constabulary. It is reported that some arrests have been made in connection with the shooting.

Smyth was a captain of the Fifteenth Sikhs during the war, and won the Victoria Cross. He lost his left arm during the fighting and returned to England with the rank of colonel. He received his commissionership a few month ago.

Col. Smyth's name figured prominently in the House of Commons last week in connection with a speech he made to the police at Listowel, County Kerry, June 19, in which it was declared he ordered his men not to be afraid to shoot with effect. He had just returned to Ireland from London, where he gave the Irish officers information on affairs in Ireland.

An inquest will be held if jurors can be obtained to serve.

People passing the club at the time had no idea a tragedy was being enacted inside. It was over in a few minutes. A moving picture show adjacent to the club was closing when the shooting occurred, and the murderers easily mingled with the crowds and escaped.

Another account of the shooting of Commissioner Smyth says that on entering the smoking room one of the assassins exclaimed:

"Where is he?" then turning to the victim, he said:

"Were not your orders to shoot at sight. Well, you are in sight, so prepare," whereupon three shots were fired.

Smyth staggered and rushed toward his assailants, only to be met by another volley. He fell against the wall, and, seeing that their object had been accomplished, the assassins left the room.

Inspector Craig was struck by a bullet which glanced off the wall.

A special cable from Cork states that the shooting of Smyth was one of the most dramatic and appalling incidents of the history of Sinn Fein activities in Ireland.

Col. Smyth had been called to London last week to explain to the Government his recent speech to the Irish constabulary at Listowel.

It appears that from that very day Smyth had been shadowed closely by Sinn Feiners. A few days ago he had returned to Ireland, and Saturday night he was in the smoke-room of the County Club, the most exclusive club in Cork. At 10.30 o'clock sharp the "vengeance gang" entered the club, held up the servants at revolver points, dashed upstairs and entered the room where Smyth and thirty others were seated at tables.

"Where is he?" cried out one of the gang.

The finger of another just then shot out in the direction where Smyth was sitting, and almost simultaneously a volley of bullets crashed out. The doomed man, evidently hit, struggled to his feet, swayed, steadied himself, and attempted to dash out of the room. Another volley followed and he fell dead on the threshold.

Inspector Craig, who was also in the room, was wounded in the leg.

The raiders then quietly pocketed their guns and left the premises, disappearing unpursued into the darkness of the night.

Immediately afterward a big force of police and military turned out to give chase. Indiscriminate shooting in the streets at suspicious looking dark objects followed. A man passing near North Gate Bridge was bayonetted and died instantly. It is understood some arrests were made later.

May Form Pool to Sell Wheat.

CALGARY, July 20. — The formation of a co-operative farmers' pool to deliver the Canadian wheat crop of 1920 on the markets of Europe may be the outcome of the decision of the Government to make the Wheat Board inoperative.

This is the proposal made by the directors of the United Farmers of Alberta at a meeting in Calgary on Sunday, when they decided to request the directors of the United Grain Growers, Ltd., and the Saskatchewan Co-operative Elevators Co. to consider the feasibility of forming such a pool in the event of the Dominion Government adhering to its decision.

The directors will first make every effort to have the board continued for another year as now constituted.

Kaiserin Ill.

THE HAGUE, July 20.—The former Kaiserin's condition was to-day reported unchanged. Prof. Hymens Vanderbergh, who was called from Utrecht, still remained at Doorn in attendance on the former German empress.

The ex-kaiser was declared to be much depressed over the ex-kaiserin's weak state and to show signs of nervousness.

Great secrecy continues to be maintained as to the ex-kaiserin's condition, which was said to be in part due to a return of her former heart trouble.

JOACHIM SICK OF LIFE

Hohenzollern Prince Committed Suicide.

Youngest Son of the ex-Kaiser Shot Himself and Died Almost Immediately—Worry Over His Financial, Social and Domestic Affairs Brought on Fits of Mental Depression, Which Led to Final Tragedy.

BERLIN, July 20. — Prince Joachim of Hohenzollern, youngest son of former Emperor William, committed suicide Saturday in Potsdam.

Advices say Prince Joachim shot himself in his residence, the Villa Leignitz, Potsdam. He was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital, where he died a few hours later.

Joachim recently had been suffering from great mental depression, and he is believed to have been in financial straits.

The only member of the former Imperial family now in Potsdam is Eitel Frederick, the former emperor's second son.

Prince Joachim was born December 17, 1890, in Berlin. He served during the late war on both the western and eastern fronts. During the first year of the war he was wounded in the fighting in France. When he recovered he was transferred to the Russian front, where he had several narrow escapes from capture, and afterwards suffered a serious illness.

He was the most popular and humane of the ex-kaiser's sons.

After the defeat of the Germans there were rumors that Emperor William would abdicate in favor of Joachim. The prince was married in 1916 to Princess Marie Augustine of Anhalt, who then was just seventeen years old. A despatch from Paris early in the present year said Joachim had brought a suit for divorce.

LITTLE GIRLS DISAPPEAR.

Thorold Mystery Looks Like Case of Murder.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., July 20. —The mystery surrounding the disappearance of the two little Thorold girls, Catharine Beechman, aged six, and Margaret Boucock, aged four, remains as deep as ever. For five days searching parties, consisting of over fifty men and women, have made a systematic hunt through all the section of land lying to the east of Thorold in the vicinity where the little Boucock girl was last seen on Tuesday afternoon walking along the high bank of the Welland Ship Canal ditch in company with David McNeill. McNeill is held in jail awaiting appearance before Magistrate Munro next Friday. There is considerable feeling and the whole countryside is aroused. McNeil says he left the little Boucock girl at the Anglican Church, and sent her home, giving her five cents to buy a cone. Yet a woman saw him walking with the girl on the canal bank. The little girl carried a doll and was talking to McNeil who held her by the hand. That night McNeil disappeared from his home in Thorold and was found at Port Dalhousie the following night. The police say he tells different stories as to why he went away and where he was.

Mrs. Boucock says that she is sure her little girl is dead, and that the murderer had hidden her body. She was a somewhat large girl for her age. The mother said it was surprising that even if McNeil did leave the girl at the Anglican Church that he had taken her far out of her way in the direction of home. He says he picked her up at the Public Library and took her through the public school grounds two or three blocks out of her way home. It appears the little girl was very often at the McNeil place, but Mrs. Boucock said she never complained of anything against McNeil, whom she seemed to regard highly.

The Beecham family said they did not think little Catharine knew McNeil. Catharine was last seen going up the hill on Front street, Thorold, from her home. The canal has been dragged, but neither the Boucocks nor the Beechams think their little girls were drowned. Some people hold the theory that the girls were abducted. In the search every spot where a body might be hidden was carefully examined, but without result. The suspense of the stricken families can scarcely be described. "If we could only find her body, it would be a relief," said Mrs. Boucock to the reporter. "Every little while there is a report that a body has been found, only to be contradicted."

Burnham Wants an Election.

PETERBORO, July 20.—"At the coming by-election I propose to stand as a candidate on the sole and only platform that a general election should be held immediately," declares J. H. Burnham, ex-M.P. for West Peterboro, in a published address to the electors of the riding. Mr. Burnham resigned his seat in the House a few days ago as a protest against the present Government remaining in power. In his latest address he could not support a Government of an entirely different party and name proposing to step in and take the reins of power without any authority from the people.

Bankers Prevent Loan..

LONDON, July 20.—Premier Theodore, of Queensland, intimated at a speech at a dinner Friday night that he has not obtained the state loan which he came to London to raise. He compained of intimidation by leading London financiers, but declared that he would not be intimidated. There was much misunderstanding in London about recent legislation in Queensland, he said. Queensland, he hoped, would never lightly regard its obligations to investors, but it would be unfortunate for the Empire and for Australia if the latter's internal conflicts were carried into the City of London.

Scotland Yard.

Scotland Yard is the headquarters of the Metropolitan Police of the City of London. It was formerly applied to a building at the corner of Charing Cross, London, and derives its name from the fact that the palace long standing at that point was assigned from the time of Edgar to Henry II. as a residence for the sovereigns of Scotland when they visited London. New Scotland Yard is on the Thames embankment, near Westminster, and has been the police headquarters since 1891.

BURTON NOT DEPOSED.

Skipper of Shamrock to Have Another Chance.

SANDY HOOK, N.J., July 20.—Captain William P. Burton will be given another chance at the wheel of Shamrock IV.

Sir Thomas Lipton would not say Monday afternoon what developments might be expected after Tuesday's race with the American defender Resolute for the America's Cup, nor would he deny that he and his advisers on the steam yacht Victoria had virtually decided to remove Captain Burton from the tiller of the cup challenger after Saturday's contest, in which Captain Burton's handling of the Lipton craft had been severely criticized. Sir Thomas was somewhat perturbed when he read in the newspapers of plans for supplanting Captain Burton. "Captain Burton will be at the wheel Tuesday, I understand," said Sir Thomas. "After that I cannot say, and, of course, I will not talk about it."

It was the general belief aboard the Victoria that Captain Burton had asked for another chance to sail the challenger and that it had been granted him. Captain Burton could not be seen.

Sir Thomas Lipton spent Monday morning conferring with his yatching experts, but was not inclined to discuss at length the report that he had planned to replace Captain William P. Burton as skipper of the cup challenger.

While stating that the report was "inaccurate," he declined to give any explanation.

Sir Thomas let it be known, however, that he was not satisfied with the handling of the Shamrock by Captain Burton in last Saturday's race.

England Surprised.

LONDON, July 20.—Yachting circles were astounded here by the news from America that Captain Burton, who sailed the Shamrock IV. in the first two heats of the America's Cup races, had been relieved.

Burton is rated as the peer of all British yacht skippers and his friends were slow to believe that Sir Thomas Lipton would replace him at the helm of the challenger.

Newspaper experts, beyond expression of the greatest surprise, declined to comment until more detailed information is received.

SYRIA WILL RESIST.

Object to French Having Mandate for Country.

LONDON, July 20.—A general mobilization in Syria has been ordered as a reply to the French ultimatum to King Feisal that he acquiesce in the French mandate for Syria, according to a despatch to the London Times from Jerusalem. The despatch adds that if Gen. Gouraud, the French commander, does not receive a satisfactory reply by today, the French, forthwith, will occupy Aleppo and march on Damascus.

Another despatch to the Times from Cairo quotes a report received from Haifa, Syria, dated last Friday, as saying the French had advanced in force to Rayak with armored cars, airplanes and artillery and that it was assumed their destination was Aleppo and Damascus.

The London Times last Saturday printed a report that the French had begun operations in Syria and were moving toward Aleppo and Damascus.

MAY BAR MANNIX.

Australian Archbishop Discussed In Commons.

LONDON, July 20.—The question as to whether the Most Rev. Daniel Mannix, Archbishop of Melbourne, Australia, shall be barred from Ireland in view of his recent utterances in the United States, is under consideration by the British Government.

This statement was made by Andrew Bonar Law, the Government spokesman, in the House of Commons, in answer to a question whether the Government would not prevent Archbishop Mannix from visiting Ireland because his presence and speeches might be likely to increase the difficulties already existing.

Mr. Bonar Law evaded answering when asked by a member of the House whether representations had been made to the Vatican regarding the speeches of Archbishop Mannix.

Turk Farmers Fear Greeks.

SMYRNA, Asia Minor, July 20.—The British Commissions visiting the Smyrna district and other parts of Turkey occupied by the Greek army are trying to quiet the uneasy Moslem population and stem the exodus of Turks, which is assuming alarming proportions.

British assurances that there will be no repetitions of the massacres which occurred when the Greeks originally occupied Smyrna under the Supreme Council's order have not quieted Turkish unrest. There is a general exodus of Turkish families eastward and southward into the Italian area, and from Thrace into Bulgaria, while Constantinople is crowded with the better class of Turkish families.

As the Turks are the actual laborers and farmers in the occupied areas, the exodus is viewed here with alarm.

Early Days of the Pear.

It is a far cry from the early days of the pear, which can be traced to very ancient times, to the fruit of the twentieth century, carried to Canada from places so remote as Australia, South Africa, and California, as well as from Old England. Homer mentions the pear as having flourished in the garden of Laertes, the father of Ulysses; and Pliny speaks of many kinds of pears in Italy, referring to the fact that fermented liquor was made from their juice. Many botanists have held the opinion that the cultivated pear was first introduced into England by the Romans; and it is beyond doubt that the monks paid great attention to the propagation of the fruit in that country. That famous old herbalist, Gerard, records the doings of certain pear-cultivators in his day. There was Master Richard Pointer, "a most cunning and curious grafter and planter of all manner of rare fruits," who raised uncommonly fine pears in his garden at Twickenham; and "an excellent grafter and painful planter, Master Henry Bunbury, of Touthill street, near unto Westminster," was equally celebrated in that respect; "painful" evidently being used in the complimentary sense of "painstaking."

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, July 20.—With a run of cattle in the neighborhood of 2800 head on the Union Yards yesterday, the demand for the better class of butchers, heavy weight steers and heifers was probably a shade easier, but with straight loads of cattle selling at $16 and in two or three cases $16.50 per cent., there was mighty little with this class. The demand keeps consistently good, but the tone was undoubtedly easier on the lighter and comparatively ill-finished lots. Probably from 15c to 25c per cwt., would about indicate the difference.

With around 1200 sheep and lambs on the market trade held about steady, choice light sheep sold from 8¾c to 9½c, heavy fat sheep and bucks, 7½c to 8¼c, choice spring lambs weighing from 70 to 80 lbs., sold from 17½c to 18c. The market was well cleaned up.

With 450 calves on sale trade was about steady, choice calves 17c to 17½c, with an odd one at 18c, medium 15c to 16½c, common calves, 9c to 12c.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

Chicago, July 19.—Cattle—Receipts, 16,000; fat, handy-weight steers, yearlings, canners, cows and desirable stockers and feeders steady to strong; heavy slow to 25c lower; top yearlings, $17; handy-weight, $16.65; heavy, $16.50; bulk beef steers, $17.75 to $16.35; good bologna and handy-weight butcher bulls firm; others slow, steady; bulk good and choice vealers, $14 to $15.

Hogs—Receipts, 30,000; mostly 25c to 35c higher; closing firm; top, $16.45; bulk, light and light butchers, $16.15 to $16.40; bulk, 250 pounds and over, $14.25 to $16.10; pigs strong to higher; bulk, $13.50 to $14.50.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts, 21,000; steady; very good western lambs, $16; bulk, $15.75 to $16; top native lambs, $15.50; bulk, $14.50 to $15.50; top yearlings, $13; choice wethers, $10.25; top ewes, $9; bulk, $8 to $8.50; choice feeder lambs, $13.75 to $14.

WINNIPEG LIVE STOCK.

Winnipeg, Man., July 19.—Dominion live stock branch.)—Receipts: Cattle, 730; hogs, 550; sheep, 27. With the bulk of offerings made up of common to medium grades, trading was dull and quotations lower at the opening this morning. Stockers and feeders of poor quality and fifty cents lower, with the demand for all classes extremely poor. A few sheep and lambs were disposed of. Good quality lambs, $11; good light sheep $8, and common $5.50. The hog market was steady at $18.50 for selects

Western Papers Demand Refund.

WINNIPEG, July 20. — Western newspapers, thirteen in number, have entered action against the Fort Francis Pulp & Paper Co., for a declaration that certain judgments or orders of the Paper Control Tribunal are valid and binding on the defendant, and to enforce the same, and for payment of all sums, due by the defendant to the plaintiffs. The amount involved is about $122,000, the largest claim being that of the Manitoba Free Press for $52,259.81.

A Heavy Storm.

ALPENA, Mich., July 20. — The barge Woolson was sunk, the barge Miztec was abandoned, and the steamer Charles H. Bradley was disabled in a heavy storm off Thunder Bay Sunday night. The tug Owen, which went to the assistance of the Bradley, sprang a leak, and had to run for the shore. The steamer Huron of the Wyandotte Transportation Co., called to the scene by the Bradley's wireless and rocket distress signals, stood by the craft during the night, and came in the morning with the crews of the two barges.

IMMIGRATION WANTED

ROOM FOR MANY MORE CITIZENS IN CANADA.

Where the New-comers Hail From and Who and What They Are—Some Facts About the Opportunities Offered by This New Country, and How the Authorities Are Handling the Important Problem.

ONE of the most important problems that Canada has to deal with is that of immigration. It is probably of importance equal to the problem of conservation of the great natural resources of the Dominion, vastly important as it is. Upon the policy in dealing with the immigrants depends, to a very noteworthy extent, the future prosperity and well-being of the Dominion. Perhaps at no other time in the history of Canada did the immigration problem demand more serious care and consideration than at present.

There still is in Canada an area of land fit for tilage estimated at 250,672,810 acres. A recent estimate placed the acreage of land in the Dominion under cultivation at only 51,427,190. In the three prairie provinces—Manitoba, Alberta, and Saskatchewan—settlers are needed for 128,000,000 acres of surveyed farm lands, and these lands are equally well suited for the carrying on of mixed farming or for grain growing. the balance of 122,672,810 acres is located in the other provinces.

It has been noted that since the war there has been an increased desire among the people of a large part of the world to earn a living from the soil. How sincere this desire will prove to a large extent it is yet too early to predict or ascertain. Canada is primarily an agricultural country and agriculture is its basic industry. While there is immense wealth in the mineral and other natural resources of the Dominion, which to develop will require the union of capital adn labor, yet the assured benefit to Canada and on graduated measure to the world beyond, must come chiefly through agricultural development. Canada already is one of the great granaries of the world. Within its 3,729,665 square miles of area there is land enough to support many times the present population.

For a country with such an immense area and such a relatively small population — approximately 8,500,000 — Canada is well equipped with railways, much more so than any other British Dominion. There is at present a total mileage of 38,879 and the two transcontinental lines operated for the Canadian Government, with other branch and subsidiary lines, form the largest public utility system in the world. Add to the extensive mileage operated by Canadian National Railways the elaborate and far-reaching system of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and a glance at a railway map will show a well planned network of railways in the Dominion. These with the inland canals, measuring 1,600 miles in length, and the rivers and great lakes, form highways of transportation that are of inestimable advantage to the development of the country, and afford the farmer easy and profitable means of moving his produce to market. Moreover, they have brought within profitable reach of markets millions of acres that previously were considered too far away to be developed with reasonable assurance of profit.

Another point that is worth noting is that Canada is nearer to Great Britain and the European countries than any other considerable part of the British Empire, except Newfoundland, and the Mother Country and Europe are profitable markets. Further, Canada is a next door neighbor to the United States with their population of well over 100,000,000 and the country to the south will, if the population there continues to increase in anything like the same proportion it has been doing of late years, be more dependent on the agricultural products of Canada than has been the case in the past. Highly productive land in Canada is selling at from $30 to $50 an acre, improved and with buildings. True, some farms have been sold recently on the prairies for as high as $100 an acre, but this price has included a good house and substantial barn and outbuildings, all located close to a railway, town or city.

For a few years before the outbreak of war a big tide of immigration was flowing into Canada. In 1913, 402,432 immigrants were admitted, of whom 150,542 were from the British Isles, 133,710 from the United States and 112,881 from all other countries, the total representing an increase of 1,584 per cent. over the year 1900 when the total immigration to Canada was 23,895.

As was to be expected immigration began to fall off with the outbreak of war and in 1918 from all countries was 50,270, the majority coming from the United States which contributed 40,194; from the British Isles, 4,484; and other countries, 5,592. Last year, however, there was a notable increase, the total being 117,633. From the British Isles came 57,251, from the United States 52,064, and 8,318 from other countries, or 67,363 more than in 1918—an increase of 134 per cent.

Immigrants from the United States, the majority of whom were of the farming class, brought with them cash and effects amounting to $18,419,406, compared with $7,351,847 in 1918.

Of the Americans who took up residence in Canada last year, Alberta attracted more than any other province. The number who went there was 13,883; Ontario got 12,093; Saskatchewan, 8,672; Quebec, 6,617; Manitoba, 4,465; British Columbia, 3,601; Maritime Provinces, 2,593, and the Yukon Territory. 140.

Ontario was the favorite province for the British settlers. last year receiving a total of 23,914; British Columbia came next with 8,346; then Manitoba with 5,918; Alberta, 5,867; Quebec, 5,513; Saskatchewan, 5,087; Maritime Provinces, 2,609, and the Yukon Territory, 7.

The vigilance of the officials of the Department of Immigration and Colonization is reflected in the figures for rejections and deportations at ocean ports and points along the international boundary. At the latter 20,211 persons were rejected as unable to comply with the immigration regulations.

The increase in rejections at border points was 132 per cent. over 1918. At ocean ports the rejections last year were 497 compared with only 53 in the previous year. These rejections were made chiefly on the grounds that the prospective immigrants were likely to become a charge on the Canadian public or were either mentally or physically defective, and that they had not the necessary funds on landing that the law demands.

Deportations at points on the boundary, between Canada and the United States, fell off last year, the figures being 288 in 1919 and 371 in 1918. Criminality was the principal ground for these deportations. At ocean ports there were 203 deported in 1919 as against 130 in 1918, an increase of 56 per cent. Criminals, insane and persons likely to become a charge on the public made up almost the entire total of 203.

It will be seen from the foregoing statement on rejections and deportations that the Department of Immigration and Colonization is exercising every vigilance in order that the settlers admitted into Canada may be of the most acceptable type.

At the present time the prospects point to a big influx of immigrants this year to Canada, but the Department of Immigration and Colonization is emphasizing that at present only settlers who will bring the land under cultivation, or who will serve as household workers are particularly in demand. For them there are opportunities in the Dominion, which it is proper to state, no other country in the world can offer.

Taft's Alberta Cane.

Former President Taft owns a walking stick that is 250,000 years old, which came from Canada.

When Prof. W. S. Foster, of Spokane, was investigating the geological history of Southern Alberta a few years ago he discovered a stump in the peat bed amid glacial drift in the valley of Old Man river. Near it were some prehistoric seaweeds in good preservation. He was unable to determine what kind of wood the stump was and the question remained an enigma. The geological stratum in which it was found had lain sixty feet beneath the surface for centuries, but had been exposed by river floods. Whether the original tree had grown in Southern Alberta or had been brought there from the neighborhood of the North Pole on an iceberg of the glacial age no one knows. Few trees grow in the region now. The age of the stump was estimated by the geologists at a quarter of a million years.

Prof. Foster took the stump home to Seattle, and when the Spokane people, on one of Mr. Taft's visits, wanted to give him a unique present, they had a cane fashioned from the wood. The walking stick, cut from the tree that may once have sheltered the mastodon and the pterodactyl, is valued at $5,000.

The Three Seas.

Mr. F. L. C. C. C. Pelham-Clinton, who has more Christian names than any other white man who ever came out of the interior of China, has just arrived in Vancouver for the purpose of settling on a small farm in British Columbia. Mr. Pelham-Clinton comes from a collateral branch of the family of which the Duke of Norfolk is the head. He has been soldier, explorer, adventurer, idealist and editor, and has written a number of books on the Orient. Among his intimates he is usually referred to as "Three Seas."

A Sure Sign.

"What a pretty girl old Greyson's got hold of!" exclaimed the envious young fellow to his friend as they watched the skaters.

"Yes," replied the other. "She certainly is pretty. But I think she must be his siter."

"Why?"

"Well, before they came on the ice I heard him ask her if she was never going to learn how to put on her own skates."

British Women Intend To Become Candidates For House of Commons

WHEN the next general election for the British Parliament is held—some say in three months and some three years—the Labor party will have at least a dozen prominent women in the field as candidates for the House of Commons. Labor headquarters in London has already promised a number of noted women with political ambitions that they are to be run and their constituencies will be allotted them as soon as it is time to begin electioneering.

Practically all of the future women Labor candidates have a national reputation as social workers and reformers and most of them were pioneers in the campaign for Women Suffrage in Great Britain. On the list as made out so far are the names of Miss Jessie Stephens, Mrs. Philip Snowden, Miss Mary Macarthur, Miss Margaret Bonfield and Mrs. Sidney Webb.

Miss Stephens made her reputation as an organizer of domestic servants' unions and in her work to improve the conditions of labor of that class of working women. She is now an important figure in the council of the Bermondsey district of London and is also a Poor Law guardian for that district. In an interview recently she forecasted her activities in case she should be elected to the House of Commons.

Miss Macarthur, who writes and speaks under her maiden name, is the wife of William C. Anderson, a former member of Parliament. She has long been one of the best-known women in the country in all work connected with the improvement of women's social and industrial position She is secretary of the Women's Trade Union League and the National Federation of Women Workers, honorary secretary of the Central Committee on Women's Employment and a member of the National Insurance Advisory Committee.

Mrs. Snowden is the wife of a widely known former Socialist member of the House, was one of the old guard suffrage workers and has written and spoken much for many social reform movements.

Miss Bonfield is one of the leading members of the more radical branch of labor women. She has been very active in all movements favoring some international organization to prevent war.

Probably the most famous of the group, from the standpoint of pure intellect, is Mrs. Sidney Webb. Either alone or with her husband she has sat on more Government commissions to investigate social and industrial conditions than any other woman in the country. She is the author of a number of books on the housing and wage questions, on prevention of destitution and kindred subjects. Her last important position was that of member of the War Cabinet Committee on Women in Industry.

These and the other women who will be Labor candidates have a knowledge of present day domestic problems far in advance of the average woman and, in most cases, probably considerably above that of their future men opponents. All are good speakers, and as the Labor party will place them in strong labor constituencies their chance of success is considered very favorable.

His "First Footing."

Nearly forty years have gone by since Mr. Lloyd George first set foot in the House of Commons.

Under the date Nov. 12, 1881, we read in his diary: "Went to Houses of Parliament. Very much disappointed with them. Grand buildings outside, but inside they are crabbed, small, and suffocating, especially the House of Commons. I will not say but that I eyed the assembly in a spirit similar to that in which William the Conqueror eyed England on his visit to Edward the Confessor —as the region of his future domain. Oh, vanity!"

On the same day the raw Welsh boy—he was only eighteen at the time—wrote: "Called at the Law Courts. Q.C.'s are not perfect. Very garrulous, but they have a despicable cant."

Three years later the future Premier, who had come to London for his Final Solicitor's Examination, paid his second visit to Westminster, and thoroughly enjoyed one of Lord Randolph Churchills' attacks on Mr. Gladstone. "It was," he says, "a clever piece of comedy. I thought Churchill an impertinent puppy, as every Liberal was bound to do; but I thoroughly enjoyed his spirit."

That Mysterious Jungle Denizen.

The interesting question may or may not be settled by Capt. L. B. Stevens, now "somewhere in Africa," but the fact that he hopes to settle it revives discussion among naturalists as to whether or not there may be a gigantic animal never seen in any menagerie, and whose nearest likeness is to be found in the drawings of the prehistoric dinosaur. For a good many years so many stories have been coming out of Africa of a seemingly prehistoric monster, that most zoologists and naturalists have more or less accepted them as having a real foundation; the individual attitude of mind ranging from complete denial, that classes the mysterious animal with the sea serpent, to belief in the possibility of survivals, in unexplored parts of the earth, of some prehistoric creatures. The most specific description tells of a creature in the general shape of a lizard, probably fifty feet long "with a thick tail like a kangaroo's, a hump on its back, and a terrifying horn on its snout, and a body covering of red scales, from which radiated pale green stripes." The weight of opinion is in favor of the actual existence in Africa of an animal to justify the reports, and if Capt. Stevens finds such an animal the question will of course be settled. If he doesn't, the tales will doubtless continue.

A Possible Reason.

Miss Smart—"I don't know what's the matter with that little man over there. He was so attentive a few moments ago, and now he won't even look at me!"

Mrs. Blank—"Perhaps he saw me come in. He's my husband."

Lift off Corns!

Doesn't hurt a bit and Freezone costs only a few cents.

With your fingers! You can lift off any hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the hard skin calluses from bottom of feet.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs little at any drug store; apply a few drops upon the corn or callus. Instantly it stops hurting, then shortly you lift that bothersome corn or callus right off, root and all, without one bit of pain or soreness. Truly! No humbug!

NOVEL WILL IN HEBREW.

Was Recently Proved In London Registry Office.

One of the quaintest wills which has passed through the English Probate Registry has been proved in the London Registry Office.

It is written in Hebrew, and the translation discloses that it is full of expressions of Biblical form.

The will, which is to be read as if written by the witnesses to it, begins as follows:

"In the name of God let us do and prosper. This day there came before us the distinguished gentleman, Ezra Joshuah Dwek, the Cohen, may the Lord preserve him, and said unto us, 'Know ye that at the present time it is my will and desire to go across the seas for good life and peace, and that, as no man knoweth how long he lives, behold it is my will and request to prevent disputes between my two sons, who are Mr. Faradg (may God preserve him) and Mr. Joseph (may God preserve him).

"'Behold I give to them in absolute gift the landed properties which . . . fell to me by inheritance from my Lord my Father now in Paradise . . . and the hesriya which I possess in the Manhallit Bahseeta which I bought from Mr. Ezra Raphael Picciotto and his brother, God bless him, and which I have now converted into a hotel.

"'I give them as a free gift to my said two sons, God bless them, the revision as from this day and the income after the end of my life, may it be prolonged in His service, they and all their appurtenances and easements and advantages and their exits and their entrances and all that is connected there in the earth and in the grounds, with the timbers, stones, walls, beams, rafters and plants in the galleries.

"'The windows in the lattice works, and of the windows, the glass in the windows, in the doors and the openings and keys and the right to fresh water and in the pipes and in the gutters which are in the entirety of the said property.

"'They their depth, their height, their length, their breadth, and the entirety and the space therein from the depth of the earth to the height of the sky, from now and henceforth they are given to my sons, Mr. Faradg and Mr. Joseph, the said Wakuf properties to each one of them one-half, and the freehold bulk properties, two-thirds to Mr. Faradg aforesaid and one-third to Mr. Joseph foresaid.

"'Of my perfect knowledge and desire, this gift they wrote out in the open market and they signed it in public, so that no man should say it is a "hole and corner arrangement," but a public and open gift altogether, a complete gift with a perfect heart and with a willing soul.'"

Unwritten Law In Bombay.

The Chief Commissioner of Bombay has dismissed the appeal in the case of Rev. L. W. D. Jackman, the United States medical missionary, who was recently sentenced to two years' imprisonment for killing Maj. H. D. Cloete. Mr. Jackman entered the appeal March 28.

In giving judgment, the commissioner said that, while admitting the homicide had been committed in a state of extreme mental affliction, it could not be overlooked that Jackman was a strong man armed with a revolver, while Major Cloete, who fought in the war, was blind in one eye.

"If," continued the commissioner, "Jackson had said: 'Cloete, you ruined my wife; I have bought a revolver; get out yours. One of us must die.' And if in the ensuing fair fight Jackman had killed Cloete, I would have reduced the sentence from two years to two weeks. As the facts were, the sentence seemed to err grievously on the side of leniency. In two similar cases Indian hillmen were sentenced to transportation for life. There cannot be one law for an American missionary and another for Indian hillmen."

The commissioner added that he felt if he had been the judge he would have been constrained to impose a sentence of seven years' rigorous imprisonment. He must decline to interfere, but would let the sentence stand.

Shower Bath for Mules.

A shower bath for mules has been installed in some of the mines of one of large steel corporations, and of some of its subsidiaries. It has proved an efficient method for the removal of dirt and perspiration from the mule, the accumulation of which is unavoidable. Humane treatment and attention to the physical well-being of these animals undoubtedly prolongs their life and increases their efficiency.

Trotzky the Red-handed

IN these days of disruption of the great Russian Empire many interesting stories are being circulated regarding men who are endeavoring to carry on government there. Leon Trotzky, one of the chief leaders of the Bolshevists, is now holding the interest of practically the whole civilized world. He has been referred to by some people as a reptile, whil others have characterized him as a monster of cruelty, but his followers appreciate him as the man daring enough to give shape to their dreams of the domination of the world by that class of individuals called the proletariat, says a writer who has just returned from Russia. In a certain sense Trotzky is a symbol, and he will remain a symbol as he vanishes into history, which will consider and judge him more as an incident in a great tragedy than as a substantial fact in it. He is more reckless in his mania for destruction of everything and everybody he finds in his way than implacable. He never reasons, he only acts on impulse. Action is the only thing which he thoroughly understands, and he carries it to the utmost limit.

The face of Trotzky has a personality. When he was younger his Semitic cast of features was not quite so pronounced as it is to-day, and there was a period when he might have been called a good-looking man. The nose has become sharper and its curve more pronounced, the hair is longer and more untidy, the eyes appear somewhat smaller, and have sunk amidst a quantity of wrinkles, which occasionally assume the hue of an old Rembrandt. The face offers this singularity; when it lights up under the influence of some strong emotion it appears powerful; while in repose it assumes the aspect of being that of an old rag-picker, thinking how he can best dispose of his unsavory wares. Trotzky has some things of which he wants occasionally to get rid, but they consist in carefully selected slices of humanity. His is a feverish life, in which he tries to put as much excitement as it can hold. There is a side of hysteria in his character, one of the principal features of which consists in his love for pomp and extravagance. In this he is truly an Oriental, and likes to compare himself to King Solomon, so conscious is he of his partiality for what is commonly called the flesh pots of Egypt.

When he arrived in Moscow the first thing he did was to select the handsomest apartment in the Kremlin for his own use and that of his wife. The one that appealed to him at once was that of the former Czarina, because its walls were hung with gold brocade, out of which the curtains and draperies were also made. His study is wonderful. In the centre of it stands a huge writing desk with a golden inkstand and a quantity of papers scattered all over it. He is not at all methodical and shows himself singularly careless in regard to his letters and to the documents submitted to him. He does not admit or understand obstacles. The writing desk, which he sometimes compares with a sneer to that of an American business man, has seen some curious things. It was upon it that the death warrant of Nicholas II. and of his family was signed. It was upon it that were sketched the outlines of the treaty which the Bolshevists accepted at Brest-Litovsk, and even some love letters were penned upon it, Trotzky being a decided admirer of the fair sex. Next to the desk stands a wide and deep armchair, in which he likes to throw himself when tired or absorbed in the preparation of a new scheme, involving as all his schemes do, much destruction and a great deal of sorrow for others.

Trotzky travels a great deal and his journeys are curious proceedings. He always uses the train of the former Czar, and when he goes about is always well guarded. A large retinue accompanies him in his wanderings, and his train is provided with every possible kind of luxury in the way of food and rare old wines. The famous anarchist is somewhat of an epicure, and he can tell exactly what is wanting in the flavor of a sauce to make it perfect. His table appointments are also of the best, but he displays a sublime indifference in the way in which he treats the beautiful tablecloths, and he throws with the utmost unconcern cigar ashes, together with the contents of numerous cups of coffee, all over them.

Trotzky likes to produce a bad impression upon his visitors. He does not care a rap for public opinion in so far as it may affect his person or his actions. He sits in his huge armchair, with his head thrown back, and while he appears to be listening, it is nevertheless evident that his thoughts are far from what he hears. When it comes his turn to speak he does it quickly with an exuberance of language which proves him more of a street orator than an after-dinner speaker. He does not care at all to convince any one, being perfectly well aware that he has got at his disposal stronger arguments than mere speech for the purpose, but he attaches great importance to impressing his listeners by the eloquence with which he knows he is endowed. After hearing the expression of a wish that things would settle down in Russia, Trotzky savagely made the following remark: "Who in the name of the devil cares whether they settle down or not? We have got some other work to do!"

Film Favorites In Denmark.

A Danish periodical recently asked its readers to vote for their favorites among the film artists of the day. The result has now been announced, and, as might have been expected, "the world's sweetheart," Mary Pickford, the Canadian actress, is top of the poll with 159,199 votes, more than 20,000 ahead of her nearest competitor, Marguerite Clark, who polled 138,852. First among the men comes smiling Douglas Fairbanks with 132,128 votes, closely followed by W. S. Hart, the "strong, silent man," with 129,565. Then come Harold Lockwood and Wallace Reid with 129,190 and 119,466 respectively. The two remaining places in the first eight are filled by Pearl White, the Pathe serial star, 114,206 votes, and Aneta Stewart with 102,876. It will be noted that the Danes like the stars who are popular right here in Canada.

I SUFFERED FIVE YEARS

Finally Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Paris, Ont.—"For five years I suffered from pains caused by displacement of my organs and in my back. All of this time I was unfit for work and was taking different medicines that I thought were good. I saw the advertisement in the papers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and took it faithfully. I am now in perfect health and do all my own work. I recommend it to others, and give you permission to publish this letter in your little books and in the newspapers as a testimonial."—Mrs. D. CASSADY, Box 461, Paris, Ont.

Why women will continue to suffer so long is more than we can understand, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound!

For forty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

KANGAROO HUNT.

Australians Chase Bounding Animals With Greyhounds.

A kangaroo hunt is to be one of the novel sights that the Prince of Wales will witness during his visit to Australia. Such a hunt is an exciting business. Sir Peter McBride, Agent-General for Victoria in London, thus describes one:

Accompanied by a pack composed of a particular breed of greyhound, the party rides out until it comes within sight of a herd of kangaroos browsing.

Very much after the manner of a fox hunt, the pack starts off in full cry, and the horsemen follow, with cries and encouragements.

Off goes the herd, covering the ground with amazing swiftness in great bounds. It is a case of the survival of the fittest.

The hounds draw nearer. The leaps of the hindermost kangaroo become shorter. Hounds and horsemen are almost upon the animal—when it will halt at a suitable place and back against a tree or rock.

As the hounds close in the kangaroo's fore-paws grip the foremost pursuer and lift it. The hind paws rise and tear the hound to ribbons!

Another dog comes on and is cast away dead. But numbers finally overwhelm the kangaroo.

The hunt may last from half an hour to two hours; it may go on all day, with hounds in pursuit of several successive kangaroos. Perhaps the whole herd will make for a wall or fence, if there is one in the neighborhood.

Over they go, in great sloping bounds, even though the barrier be ten feet high. And unless the huntsmen can go round it they are "stumped."

Or the herd may be hunted into a prepared enclosure and there exterminated. This kind of hunt is often practiced because of the annoyance kangaroos give to the farmers.

The latest method, however, is the motor car hunt.

Cars drive out to a herd and give chase. Somebody stands on the footboard, and when the car plunges among the animals or comes alongside one, he makes a grab for the kangaroo's tail.

The kangaroo bounds on; the car follows. Another grab, and a miss. At last, however, the crouching hunter will seize the tail and swing the animal over his head into the back of the car, where it is despatched by a knock on the head.

Kangaroo hunting is more exciting than fox hunting, but the danger is no greater—unless a huntsman were unwise enough to get within reach of the terrible hind paws.

Moving the Feast.

When Almanack's, the original Brooke's, was founded, it was under "distinguished patronage," for Charles James Fox, and casual dukes and earls saw it down the ways. Of course they drew up an elaborate set of rules, the most painful of which was as follows: "Dinner shall be served at exactly half-past four o'clock and the bill shall be brought in at seven." Fox had his faults, his "spots on the sun," as Lord Tenterden said of Erskine, but in many ways he had a modern mind, and for all he loved candles and the hour when the fairies were chilliest and Napoleon said was the most ticklish for courage, he was a child of light. How sad it is then to behold so great a man so much a slave to the small conventions of his day that he could as a scholar and a gentleman ask other gentlemen and scholars to dine at so hideous an hour as half-past four o'clock, even though the bill was to be handed in at seven? But in 1764 men did dine at half-past four o'clock and thought themselves pretty fellows. And they were, compared with fifteenth century John Paston who did his dining at 11 o'clock in the morning, at which hour he stoked himself with beef, pork and mutton. In those prehistoric days, beef was an article of commerce, mutton was current, and pork passed from hand to hand. They had no breakfast foods, no condensed milk—nothing in fine, save food. In our memory, we can recall the day in Oxford when twopence would buy a bland and snowy cauliflower, and even the consorts of dons for their Savoys at one a penny. Now all is changed, but we cannot regret that dinner is no longer at 11 o'clock in the morning, nor yet at half-past four o'clock in the afternoon. Yet these things oscillate, and men may find themselves dining again at half-past four o'clock, though one can be quite sure that with the great progress made in methods of finance, the bill will be presented well before seven.

Brown—McKittrick.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place on Tuesday, June 29th, 1920, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, at St. John's rectory, Selby, by the Rev. R. W. Irvine, B. A., when Olive Beatrice, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James McKittrick, Selby, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Thomas Leslie Brown, Leinster, fourth son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Brown. The bride was given away by her father, and was gowned in white embroidered voile. They were unattended. After the ceremony a dainty tea was served them at the home of the bride's parents, and the happy couple took up residence at once on the groom's farm at Leinster, where he is a prosperous farmer. The bride will be greatly missed in her former home as she has been assistant township clerk of the Township of Richmond for the past eight years. Much credit is due her for faithful services rendered to this township. The many friends all join in wishing them a long and happy wedded life.

Bowling Club Notes.

On Thursday evening last three rinks from Deseronto visited Napanee to play the local bowlers. A very interesting game was played, resulting in Napanee winning the round by fourteen shots, the rinks skipped by Dr. Leonard for Napanee, and Mr. I. Allen for Deseronto, tied, and in the play off Napanee won out by being two up. After the game was over the Deseronto players were entertained to a light lunch in the club rooms by the Napanee Bowling Club. It is expected that several rinks from Kingston will play the local club during the week.

BASEBALL

In one of the best and most exciting games played at the Driving Park, Napanee defeated Wellington by the score of 4-3.

The home team came from behind in the eighth and the necessary punch was there, by scoring three runs and putting the game on ice. In the last innings though Wellington came near tieing up again. A bad peg to first by Beard nearly doing the trick but the last man up fanned and the game was over.

Napanee were the first to score but not until the fifth. Scrimshaw singled and E. Loucks doubled to right, scoring Scrimshaw.

Wellington were shut out until the seventh when they scored one run. Wellington scored two in the eighth. They had a glorious chance to win the game right there, when with the bases full and only one down, the next three batters hit to the infield and the runners were forced out at the plate. Napanee were shut out in the 6th and 7th, but in the 8th McNeil and Johnston both singled but the next two baters up whiffed and McLaughlin scored them both with a double to deep centre and he scored the winning run on a single by Blute.

E. Loucks pitched good ball and was accorded excellent support, four fast double plays getting him out of a couple of bad holes. Ross Loucks also pulled off some good catches in left field. H. Pyne pitched good ball for Wellington and he, too, was given good support. P. Pine at short fielded his position in good style and accepted all his chances without an error.

Ben Beard picked off a couple of hard hit balls and also made a fast play of a grounder he had fumbled but picked up and threw to first while on his knees, making the third out.

Only a handful of spectatonr were present, but those who were there thoroughly enjoyed the game. It costs money to put a team in the league and the boys should be given better support and help to encourage good, clean sport.

Napanee plays their next game away from home when they meet Picton on July 29th. Picton are heading the League with 3 wins and no defeats, but they are due for a fall soon.

Napanee do not play a home game until August 18th but they are trying to arrange exhibition games with outside clubs.

CHAUTAUQUA ITEMS

CHARLES CRAWFORD GORST

Lecturer and Bird Imitator

Mr. Gorst is unique upon the platform in the character of the work that he does. He lectures upon the birds. He presents to the audience a picture, in color, of the bird and then he imitates it. He has made the study of birds his life work, and imitates over 400 of them. His purpose is to awaken a renewed interest in Birds and Nature. He tries to present every bird, in such a way that you can go out and identify it.

The remarkable thing about Mr. Gorst is the high tones which he produces. He can sound a musical note a whole octave higher than the humming bird, which is supposed to sound a note three octaves higher than any human voice can sing. Mr. Gorst can reach nearly twice as high above low "C" as any tone that has ever been sung by the human voice.

This will be one of the most attractive entertainments of the entire week, and will be featured on the evening of the Second Day.

REV. (CAPT.) FATHER R. J. J. WATT, H.C.F., M.A. LL.M., C.R.L., G.C.O.E.

Lecture: "Britain and Her Problems."

Father Watt is a Catholic Priest and a soldier. He served in an important branch of the Diplomatic Service of Great Britain, visiting several countries on special missions. He was present at the Mons Retreat, the Battle of Ypres, "The Damned Eighteenth," Aubers Ridge, Neuve Chapelle, Festubert, Loos, and other campaigns. He was seriously wounded.

He is a brilliant speaker, as well as a scholar and writer, and the English government found him splendidly equipped for special diplomatic work.

He was known as England's "First Line Chaplain." His lecture on the afternoon of the Third Day will be an inspiring one.

HYDRO IN EASTERN ONTARIO

Everyone in close touch with the operations of the Hydro Electric Power Commission knows all about its continued efforts to meet the needs of municipalities in Eastern Ontario. But a great majority of the electors have no means of knowing. The object of this article is to summarize that portion of the Annual Report which deals with these activities, as distinguished from the larger operations based on Niagara.

From Whitby to Kingston, and northward as far as Fenelon Falls and Madoc, Hydro-Electric power is supplied by the Central Ontario System a self-contained organization acquired by the co-operating municipalities in 1918 and now administered by the Commission. The equipment of the various private power companies operating in the district has been improved. New sources of supply have been tapped, and the transmission lines have been modernized and extended.

The general plan of the System makes Fenelon Falls in the West and Healey's Falls (near Campbellford) the chief sources of energy. From Fenelon Falls a transmission line runs southward through Lindsay to Port Hope, touching Omemee and Millbrook on the way. West of Port Hope the line goes by Newcastle and Bowmanville to Whitby, but at Oshawa there is a distributing substation serving four villages in the district. From Newcastle a line runs to Orono.

The eastern portion of the System, dependent upon Healey's Falls and subordinate generating plants, includes all the Bay of Quinte towns from Trenton to Kingston. Distributing lines run from Napanee to Camden and from Trenton to Picton. Farther north, Campbellford, Madoc and Tweed are served by a separate high-tension line running eastward from Healey's Falls. During the past year the plant at Healey's Falls was enlarged and a new development at Ranney's Falls on the Trent River is projected. There is a growing demand for power from municipalities not yet in co-operation. The peak-load of power generated for the Central Ontario System is in the neighborhood of 25,000 horse-power.

The Commission buys power from a private company in Hull to serve the city of Ottawa.

Smith's Falls, Perth and Carleton Place form the Rideau System, supplied by the Commission's new generating plant at High Falls and by the purchase of power from a private company at Merrickville.

A beginning has also been made along the St. Lawrence River. For a time two small generating plants were in operation to supply Brockville, Prescott, Morrisburg, Iroquois and Cornwall but the power-supply was inadequate. Last year the Commission made a contract for the purchase of power from the Cedar Rapids Transmission Company. Now the municipal demand has reached about 2,000 horse-power. The possibilities of expansion in the Hydro business for Eastern Ontario are limitless.

LONDON CONCERT PARTY

The London Concert party from the Conservatory of Music at London, Ontario, is another Canadian company that gives a diversified programme that cannot fail to please.

F. Lingforth Willgoose, principal of London Conservatory of Music is an Englishman who has taken graduate honors in the New England Conservatory of Music in general musicianship; he is an Associate of the Royal College of Organists, London, Eng., bachelor of Music of Dunhelm University, England. He has a pleasing and melodious tenor voice, and has had wide experience as an accompanist to many well known artists.

Miss Elsa Kitchener is a young soprano, with a remarkable lyric voice, whose home is in Toronto and has become a member of the London Concert party. She sings with much spirit, and expression, and does equally well some of the large things, and the lighter fantastic songs. Her voice will greatly please.

Miss Florence Dewey is a violinist and a contralto of note. She has studied at the New York Musical Arts Conservatory and numbers Rogers and Gruenberg among her teachers. Her work upon the violin is very fine.

Horman J. Brourer is a splendid baritone. He sings some of the great things in music with a rich, strong and mellow baritone voice that pleases wondrously. He is also a leader of community singing of wide experience, having been connected with the United States Government as community director and organizer during the war.

The London Concert Party will appear on the afternoon and evening of the first day.

REV. ROBERT WHYTE

Rev Robert Whyte, pastor of one of the most influential churches in Canada, Knox Presbyterian church, Ottawa, is known as a pulpit orator of unusual ability, bright and vivatious. As a lecturer he is considered by some to excell even his work in the pulpit. Mr. Whyte occupies an important point in the programme, on the afternoon of the sixth day, and his message will be cordially welcomed by our Chautauqua audiences.

LUDEC WAS FORCED TO LIVE ON MILK

Could Eat Nothing Solid For Months—Tanlac Again Proves Merit.

"Tanlac has done for me in just a few days what I have been trying for five years to get other medicines to do," said Egene Ludec, 1351 Logan street, Montreal, Canada, an employee of the Columbus Rubber Co., Ltd., Montreal.

"For the past five years I have ben in a badly run down, weakened condition. My appetite was very poor, and while I never dared to eat meat or any other solid food but confined myself strictly to a milk diet, I suffered terribly from indigestion. After every meal I would bloat up with gas, my heart would palpitate dreadfuly and I had awful cramps in the pit of my stomach. I suffered nearly always with severe headaches, which at times was so bad I could scarcely see my eyes pained me so bad. I was so exetremely restless at night I do not believe I ever slept more than two hours any night. My complexion was pale and sallow, my tongue was always coated and if I got the least bit hot I would break out al over with a rash."

"I tried many different medicines but nothing ever did me any god until I began taking Tanlac. It seemed to be made especialy for my case and I commenced to improve almost at once and gained five pounds by the time I had finished the first bottle. I have only taken two bottles sot far, but even now I can eat all the meat or anything else I want without having the least sign of gas, palpitation or cramps and I have such a big appetite my meat and grocery bill has more than doubled. I sleep fine every night and have not had a headache since I started taking Tanlac. My complexion has cleared up to a god healthy color, my tongue is no longer coated and I never have a sign of rash. In fact I am enjoying perfect health. I don't think there is another medicine that will compare with Tanlac and I am glad to have the opportunity to recommend it."

Tanlac is sold in Napanee at WALLACE'S Drug Store, in Camden East by R. J. OSTER, in Wagarville by S. JACKSON.

THE CHAUTAUQUA PLAY

"NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH"

The point of the play is the difficulty of telling the exact truth under all circumstances that may occur even during so short a period as 24 hours. To Robt. Bennett partner in a firm of stockbrokers, falls the impossible task, the manner of its incidence on his shouders being led up to with considerable ingenuity. It all came of the charitable efforts of Gwendolyn Ralston, daughter of Bennett's senior partner. Under the inspiration of a mendicant Bishop Gwendolyn is endeavouring to raise $20,000 by charity, her close fisted father having lightly promised to double any amount above that sum which she may collect. Ten thousand dollars apparently represents the limit to be achived by the power of pleading, and this sum she brings to Bennett, with the trifling request that he double it by the day after to-morrow by the simple process of investing in some perfectly safe speculation. The problem appears insuperable until Bennett, who has natural leanings toward the truth, in protesting against his senior partner's methods of disposing of doubtful stock, is drawn into an argument which results in a bet of $10,000 being made that he will not tell the exact truth under every circumstance for a period of 24 hours.

The wealth of material for farcial purposes which the situation affords is obvious. Bennett, hounded by the three men with whom he has made the bet, vainly endeavors to avoid human society, and is constantly misunderstood by Gwendolyn, for whose sake he is making himself a social pariah by his unpalatable truths.

The whole play is neatly constructed, the way is cleared quickly for the presentation of the general situation, and the process itself is lively and amusing. The action is rapid, the situations dovetail well into one another, and every character contributes its part towards the building of the play.

LEAGUE WILL SUCCEED.

Sir Herbert Ames Optimistic Regarding Future.

Sir Herbert Ames, financial director of the League of Nations, who has returned to London from Rome, where he presented his first budget to the meeting of the council of the league, states he will resign his seat in the Canadian Parliament at the end of this session. Sir Herbert returns to Canada at once, and if the session is not over he will make a statement as to the work of the league from his seat in the Commons. It is understood he may take the occasion to set at rest the apprehensions fostered by pessimists and the campaign of United States origin concerning the league's prospects of success. The facts are that practically all the powers of the world will shortly have joined the league with the exception of the United States, China, Cuba, and Hayti. When the time comes there is no doubt that Germany, Austria, and eventually Russia will also be included. The present council, which is the executive body of the league, has not been elected by the assembly, and as a result has been dealing only with questions of immediate urgency such as the arrangement of the international financial conference, setting up the new Hague Tribunal, fighting typhus in Poland and repatriation of Siberian prisoners. Its next meeting will be at San Sebastian, Spain, July 27, when the program will be prepared for the first meeting of the General Assembly in Brussels on November 10, at which Canada will be represented by its own delegates. The date of the international financial conference, for which Canada's three delegates have already been named, is fixed tentatively for July 16, but awaits the decisions of the Spa conference as to the amount of the German indemnity, lacking knowledge of which it is impossible to discuss European problems with any definiteness.

At the meeting of the council in Rome, Mr. Ames presented a budget totalling $1,250,000, two-thirds of which has already been paid in by signatory countries.

Children of Modern Science.

Remembering the lessons of the past, said Sir Robert Hadfield at Sheffield recently, his firm (Hadfields, Ltd.) prepared to undertake, should the gun ever be built to fire them, the production of armor-piercing projectiles weighing nearly 2½ tons each and 21 inches in diameter.

This is probably 50 per cent. heavier than the biggest projectile yet fired. It would perforate 30 inches of hard-faced armor at a range of ten miles, or 60 inches of such armor at short proving ground range, and would require 1,200 pounds of propellant.

The "Woolwich Infant," completed early last year, is the largest gun ever constructed, weighing 150 tons, and fires an 18-inch shell, weighing about 1½ tons, piercing 22 inches of armor at ten miles.

Capt. Delamare-Mae, a Frenchman, has invented a new type of gun capable of firing shells 150 miles.

LEGAL COLUMNS—MUNICIPAL WORLD

ST. THOMAS, ONT.

QUESTION re MUNICIPAL LIABILITY FOR PRIVATE APPROACH CULVERTS AND BRIDGES.

T.V.A.—I am County Road Superintendent and would like to know to what extent is county liable (if liable at all) for interference with owner's access to property by ditching along highway.

I have had certain ditching to do, and in some cases more or less slightly changing the condition of access to farm lands, and now an owner of adjoining land has made claim, and although I don't consider the case one calling for compensation, still I want to acquaint myself with the law on the point.

I am told that the matter has been referred to in your paper at different times. I understand a Municipal Corporation is under no obligation to repair approaches from the highway to private property constructed by the owner of the property, but if pursuing my road repairs I construct a ditch passing where he has had egress and ingress to and from this property, to what extent must I repair his approaches? I conceive Section 325 Municipal Act is the statutory law applicable, that is, when the owner's land is "injuriously affected" by my work he is entitled to compensation by arbitration, and he cannot bring an action for damage. Would the construction of a ditch along the road for highway purposes be "injuriously affecting" his land., entitling him to compensation?

I may be putting the case imperfectly but I trust you will gather from what I say what I want to know, and do your best to enlighten me on the subject. Perhaps you have law laid down sufficiently in some former answers to correspondents. If so will you kindly send me a copy thereof.

ANSWER—In June, 1918, we published the following questions and answers, which give information required:

QUESTION 1. A number of farmers have placed small bridges over the road ditches opposite their farm gates. Is the township under legal obligation to restore bridges when removed for the purpose of cleaning the ditch?

ANSWER. No, but when grade of street is lowered or raised, destroying access to property, the owner of property abutting is entitled to compensation from the municipality. See Municipal Act, Section 325.

QUESTION 2. Is the township under legal obligation to restore such bridges where the bridge decays?

ANSWER. No, not unless it is over a drain constructed under the provisions of the Municipal Drainage Act. There is no authority for asserting that it is a duty incumbent on the corporation to provide a bridge or crossing from the street to the plaintiff's land and house. When approach constructed by private owner, it is his duty to keep it in repair. When private approach constructed, obstructs ditch, municipality may remove same.

QUESTION 3. Is the council under obligation to build a new bridge over the ditch opposite a farm gate where ditch is newly dug and bridge is necessary for crossing the ditch opposite the farm gate.

ANSWER. No. See answer to Question 1 above; see also Municipal Act, Section 399 (67.)

QUESTION 4. On one of the concession lines in our township, at the entrance of the farmer's gate, the road ditch has become filled up. It seems there was a culvert there some years ago but it has become broken down and filled up. The farmer across the road claims that water lodges in the ditch and soaks through the road and damages his farm, and threatens to sue the township. What would be the proper action for the council to take?

ANSWER. Clean up the ditch and prosecute the farmer if he obstructs it in making a crossing to his gate.

Carolyn of the Corners

By RUTH BELMORE ENDICOTT

(Copyright, 1918, by Dodd, Mead & Company, Inc.)

"We're safe now," he said hoarsely, jumping in himself, and holding Carolyn May and Amanda. "We've got water enough here, thanks be! Hang on to me, Mandy. I'm not going to let you get away—no more, never!"

And by the way in which the woman clung to his arm it was evident that she did not propose to lose him.

"My, Uncle Joe! you are just the bravest man!" declared Carolyn May, finding her voice. "Isn't he, Miss Mandy? And, see, his arm is all burned. Dear me, we must get home to Aunty Rose and let her do it up for him."

CHAPTER XVII.

"Two's Company."

Toward the east the forest tract was completely burned to the banks of Codler's creek. As the wind which had sprung up had driven the fire westward, there was little danger of the flames pressing nearer than the creek to Sunrise Cove and The Corners.

Joseph Stagg led the horse out of the water and advised Miss Amanda and Carolyn May to get into the seat of the buckboard again. Then he set forth, leading the horse along the narrow beach, while Prince followed wearily in the rear.

It was a rough route they followed, but the blackened forest was still too hot for them to pass through, had they been able to find a path. This was a lonely strip of shore and they saw no living soul but themselves.

It was a long tramp, and the horse, the dog, and the man were alike wearied. Carolyn May went fast asleep with her head pillowed in Miss Amanda's lap.

The latter and Joseph Stagg talked much. Indeed, there was much for them to say after all these years of silence.

The woman, worn and scorched of face, looked down on the smutted and sweating man with an expression in her eyes that warmed him to the marrow. She was proud of him. And the gaze of love and longing that the hardware merchant turned upon Amanda Parlow would have amazed those people that believed he had consideration and thought only for business.

In these few hours of alarm and close intimacy the man and the woman had leaped all the barriers time and pride had set up. Nothing further could keep Joseph Stagg and Amanda Parlow apart. And yet they never for one instant discussed the original cause of their estrangement. That was a dead issue.

The refugees reached The Corners about nine o'clock. Jedidiah Parlow had hobbled up to the store and was just then organising a party of searchers to go to the rescue of the hardware dealer and those of whom he had set forth in search.

The village turned out en masse to welcome the trio who had so miraculously escaped the fire. Aunty Rose's relief knew no bounds. Mr. Parlow was undeniably glad to see his daughter safe; otherwise, he would never have overlooked the pitiable state his horse was in. Poor Cherry would never be the same unblemished animal again.

"Well, I vum!" he said to Joseph Stagg, "you done it! Better'n I could, too, I reckon. I'll take the hoss home. You comin' with me, Mandy?" Then he saw the burns on the younger man's shoulders and arms. "The good land of Jehoshaphat! here's work for you to do, Mandy. If you air any sort of a nurse, I reckon you got your hands full right here with Joe Stagg," he added, with some pride in his daughter's ability. "Phew! them's bad-lookin' burns!"

"They are indeed," agreed Aunty Rose.

It was a fact that Mr. Stagg was in a bad state. Carolyn May had suggested that Aunty Rose would dress his burns, but Miss Amanda would allow nobody to do that but herself.

When the curious and sympathetic neighbors had gone and Miss Amanda was still busy making Joseph Stagg comfortable in the sitting room, Aunty Rose came out into the kitchen, where she had already bathed and helped Carolyn May to undress, and where the little girl was now sleepily eating her supper of bread and milk.

"Well, wonders don't ever cease, I guess," she said, more to herself than to her little confidant. "Who'd have thought it?"

"Who'd have thought what, Aunty Rose?" inquired Carolyn May.

"Your uncle and Mandy Parlow have made it up," breathed the woman, evidently much impressed by the wonder of it.

"Yes, indeed!" cried the child. "Isn't it nice? They aren't mad at each other any more."

"No, I should say they're not," Aunty Rose observed with grimness. "Far from it. It's a fact! I wouldn't have believed it if I hadn't seen it with my own eyes. Holding hands in there like a pair of— Well, do you know what it means, Carolyn May?"

"That they love each other," the child said boldly. "And I'm so glad for them!"

"So am I," declared the woman, still in a whisper. "But it means changes here. Things won't be the same for long. I know Joseph Stagg for what he is."

"What is he, Aunty Rose?" asked Carolyn May in some trepidation, for the housekeeper seemed to be much moved.

"He's a very determined man. Once he gets set in a way, he carries everything before him. Mandy Parlow is going to be made Mrs. Joseph Stagg so quick that it'll astonish her. Now, you believe me, Carolyn May."

"Oh!" was the little girl's comment.

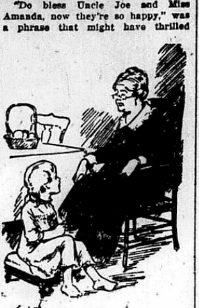
"There'll be changes here very sudden. 'Two's company, three's a crowd,' Carolyn May. Never was a truer saying. Those two will want just each other—and nobody else.

"Well, Carolyn May, if you've finished your supper, we'd better go up to bed. It's long past your bedtime."

"Yes, Aunty Rose," said the little girl in muffled voice.

Aunty Rose did not notice that Carolyn May did not venture to the door of the sitting room to bid either Uncle Joe or Miss Amanda good-night. The child followed the woman upstairs with faltering steps, and in the unlighted bedroom that had been Hannah Stagg's she knelt at Aunty Rose's knee and murmured her usual petitions.

"Do bless Uncle Joe and Miss Amanda, now they're so happy," was a phrase that might have thrilled Aunty Rose at another time. But she was so deep in her own thoughts that she heard what Carolyn May said perfunctorily.



"Yes, Isn't It Nice They Aren't Mad at Each Other."

With her customary kiss, she left the little girl and went downstairs. Carolyn May had seen so much excitement during the day that she might have been expected to sleep at once, and that soundly. But it was not so.

The little girl lay with wide-open eyes, her imagination at work.

"Two's company, three's a crowd." She took that trite saying, in which Aunty Rose had expressed her own feelings, to herself. If Uncle Joe and Miss Amanda were going to be married, they would not want anybody else around! Of course not!

"And what will become of me?" thought Carolyn May chokingly.

All the "emptiness" of the last few months swept over the soul of the little child in a wave that her natural cheerfulness could not withstand. Her anchorage in the love of Uncle Joe and Miss Amanda was swept away.

The heart of the little child swelled. Her eyes overflowed. She sobbed herself to sleep, the pillow muffling the sounds, more forlorn than ever before since she had come to The Corners.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Journey.

It was certainly a fact that Amanda Parlow immediately usurped some power in the household of the Stagg homestead. She ordered Joseph Stagg not to go down to his store that next day. And he did not!

Nor could he attend to business for several days thereafter. He was too stiff and lame and his burns were too painful.

Chet Gormley came up each day for instructions and was exceedingly full of business. A man would have to be very exacting indeed to find fault with the interest the boy displayed in running the store just as his employer desired it to be run.

"I tell you what it is, Car'lyn," Chet drawled, in confidence. "I'm mighty sorry Mr. Stagg got hurt like he did. But lemme tell you, it's just givin' me the chance of my life!

"Why, maw says that Mr. Stagg and Miss Mandy Parlow'll git married for sure now!"

"Oh, yes," sighed the little girl. "They'll be married."

"Well, when folks git married they allus go off on a trip. Course, they will. And me—I'll be runnin' the business all by myself. It'll be great! Mr. Stagg will see jest how much value I be to him. Why, it'll be the makin' of me!" cried the optimistic youth.

Yes, Carolyn May heard it on all sides. Everybody was talking about the affair of Uncle Joe and Miss Amanda.

Every time she saw her uncle and her "pretty lady" together the observant child could not but notice that they were utterly wrapped up in each other.

Miss Amanda could not go past the easy chair in which the hardware dealer was enthroned without touching him. He, as bold as a boy, would seize her hand and kiss it.

Love, a mighty, warm, throbbing spirit, had caught them up and swept them away out of themselves—out of their old selves, at least. They had eyes only for each other—thoughts only for each other.

Even a child could see something of this. The absorption of the two made Aunty Rose's remarks very impressive to Carolyn May.

A week of this followed—a week in which the trouble in Carolyn May's heart and brain seethed until it became unbearable. She was convinced that there would soon be no room for her in the big house. She watched Aunty Rose pack her own trunk, and the old lady looked very glum, indeed. She heard whispers of an immediate marriage, here in the house, with Mr. Driggs as the officiating clergyman.

Carolyn May studied things out for herself. Being a child, her conclusions were not always wise ones.

She felt that she might be a stumbling block to the complete happiness of Uncle Joe and Amanda Parlow. They might have to set aside their own desires because of her. She felt vaguely that this must not be.

"I can go home," she repeated over and over to herself.

"Home" was still in the New York city apartment house where she had lived so happily before that day when her father and mother had gone aboard the ill-fated Dunraven.

Their complete loss out of the little girl's life had never become fixed in her mind. It had never seemed a surety—not even after her talks with the sailor, Benjamin Hardy.

Friday afternoon the little girl went to the churchyard and made neat the three little graves and the one long one on the plot which belonged to Aunty Rose Kennedy. She almost burst into tears that evening, too, when she kissed Aunty Rose good night at bedtime. Uncle Joe was down at the Parlows'. He and Mr. Parlow actually smoked their pipes together in harmony on the cottage porch.

Aunty Rose was usually an early riser; but the first person up at The Corners on that Saturday morning was Carolyn May. She was dressed a full hour before the household was usually astir.

She came downstairs very softly, carrying the heavy bag she had brought with her the day she had first come to The Corners. She had her purse in her pocket, with all her money in it and she had in the bag most of her necessary possessions.

She washed her face and hands. Her hair was already combed and neatly braided. From the pantry she secured some bread and butter, and, with this in her hand, unlocked the porch door and went out. Prince got up, yawning, and shook himself. She sat on the steps to eat the bread and butter, dividing it with Prince.

"This is such a beautiful place, Princey," she whispered to the mongrel. "We are going to miss it dreadfully, I s'pose. But then— Well, we'll have the park. Only you can't run so free there."

Prince whined. Carolyn May got up and shook the crumbs from her lap. Then she unchained the dog and picked up her bag. Prince pranced about her, glad to get his morning run.

The little girl and the dog went out of the gate and started along the road toward Sunrise Cove.

The houses had all been asleep at The Corners. So was the Parlow cottage when she trudged by. She would have liked to see Miss Amanda, to kiss her just once. But she must not think of that! It brought such a "gulpy" feeling into her throat.

Nobody saw Carolyn May and Prince until she reached Main street. Then the sun had risen and a few early persons were astir; but nobody appeared who knew the child or who cared anything about her.

At the railroad station nobody spoke to her, for she bought no ticket. She was not exactly clear in her mind about tickets, anyway. She had found the conductor on the train coming up from New York a kind and pleasant man and she decided to do all her business with him.

Had she attempted to buy a ticket of the station agent undoubtedly he would have made some inquiry. As it was, when the train came along Carolyn May, after seeing Prince put into the baggage car, climbed aboard with the help of a brakeman.

"Of course, if he howls awfully," she told the baggageman, who gave her a check without question, "I shall have to go in that car and sit with him."

There were not many people in the car. They steamed away from Sunrise Cove and Carolyn May dabbled her eyes with her handkerchief and told herself to be brave.

The stations were a long way apart and the conductor did not come through for some time. When he did open the door and come into the car Carolyn May started up with a glad cry. It was the very conductor who had been so kind to her on the trip up from New York.

The railroad man knew her at once and shook hands most heartily with her.

"Where are you going, Carolyn May?" he asked.

"All the way with you, sir," she replied.

"To New York?"

"Yes, sir. I'm going home again."

"Then I'll see you later," he said, without asking for her ticket.

The conductor remembered the little girl very well, although he did not remember all the details of her story.

He was very kind to her and brought her satisfying news about Prince in the baggage car. The brakeman was nice, too, and brought her water to drink in a paper cup.

At last the long stretches of streets at right angles with the tracks appeared—asphalt streets lined with tall apartment houses. This could be nothing but New York city. Her papa had told her long ago that there was no other city like it in the world.

She knew One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street and its elevated station. That was not where she had boarded the train going north, when Mr. Price had placed her in the conductor's care but it was nearer her old home—that she knew. So she told the brakeman she wanted to get out there and he arranged to have Prince released.

The little girl alighted and got her dog without misadventure. She was down on the street level before the train continued on its journey downtown.

At the Grand Central terminal the conductor was met with a telegram sent from Sunrise Cove by a certain frantic hardware dealer and that telegram told him something about Carolyn May of which he had not thought to ask.

CHAPTER XIX.

The Home of Carolyn May.

It was some distance from the railroad station to the block on which Carolyn May Cameron had lived all her life until she had gone to stay with Uncle Joe Stagg. The child knew she could not take the car, for the conductor would not let Prince ride.

WHERE HEROES SLEEP

ALL CANADIAN GRAVES ARE BEING MARKED.

A List of the Cemeteries In France Where the Men Who Died for Freedom Lie Buried Indicates the Size of the Task and the Splendid Work That Is Being Done.

OVER in France and Belgium they are balancing the Canadian human ledger of the great war, says Roland Hill. Working in conjunction with the Imperial Graves Section, whose headquarters are at Hesdin, Pas de Calais, a Canadian section is working to correct mistakes that are inevitable, collect new data and keep up a card system which ultimately will register every fallen Canadian, his battalion, whether killed in action or died of wounds. They give the location of the soldiers' graves and over twelve thousand of these cards are on record. There are forty thousand to be completed and the all-too-small section, each of which is an officer or sergeant who has seen active service, work hard to keep up with the game. It will take the Canadian detachment at least two years to complete their task.

Attached to the section which in France and Belgium is under the command of Captain W. T. Cheyne, is a photographic department. This organization has Lieut. J. A. Jarche at its head, a man who has had considerable experience on the London Daily Mirror. Already thousands of pictures of crosses have been taken and the pictures sent back to mothers and widows at home in Canada.

It is planned to complete as many Canadian cemeteries as possible. Already the work is well advanced in many cases, especially on the later fields of battle. These are wonderfully kept by the Amiens section of the Canadian War Graves detachment. This section tramp the old fighting grounds, searching for isolated graves of Canada's fallen, exhume the lonely body and it is reburied in a cemetery.

In the larger battlefields such as Vimy or Passchendaele, memorials, some to battalions, others to brigades and divisions, have been erected in solid stone. Their sides bear the names of the fallen written in granite, permanent even against the weather, which only those who have fought in France and Flanders know.

They are well liked, these men from far-off Canada, who go out on the humane search for those men until they are found. They generally trace 75 per cent. of the two or three thousand requests which come over from Canada every month.

On a recent visit to France I met two well-known Toronto men who had been out with an officer to find the last resting place of their boys, both pilots in the R. N. A. S. They were successful. Gradually filtering through from there come grave locations and identity disks of Canadian airmen and observers who have been taken prisoners in death. Nearly two hundred bodies of men of the First and Second Battalions who fell at Ypres and St. Julien in April, 1915, were discovered recently. They represent Ottawa, Montreal and the Far West of the Dominion, and through this human ledger of war, which is being balanced so efficiently, their names and records will pass in due time back to their homeland and many loved ones will find their heroes have not been lost, but at last are resting peacefully alongside their Canadian comrades.

Some idea of the immensity of the work of these loyal Canadian sections can be gathered from the following list of cemeteries, mostly all Canadian, which have been checked and registered to date. The map location, the row in the cemetery and the number of any particular grave are all tabulated on individual cards.

The cemeteries with Canadian burials in France and Flanders are as follows:

A Sure Cure.

Jinks—My chimney has been smoking all day. How can I cure it?"

Benkins—"Give it one of those cigars you gave me the other day. I'm cured."

"Alice," said Mrs. Grouchy, "I don't like the looks of that man who called to see you last night."

"Well, well," replied Alice, "ain't it funny, ma'am? He said the same about you."

Children Cry for Fletcher's
CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Comfort—The Mother's Friend.

FIGHTING A PEST.

Grasshoppers Are a Plague In the West This Year.

The Governments of Manitoba and Saskatchewan are fully alive to the danger of the grasshopper menace to the western crops. In Saskatchewan last fall, grasshoppers laid eggs in from forty to fifty rural municipalities. The eggs have been examined carefully during the last few weeks by the provincial field experts and a large percentage survived the winter and the embryo is rapidly forming now; in fact, in three places, messages say, the young are beginning to emerge, Carnduff, Stoughton and Carlyle.

Ten field directors are in direct touch with the situation and the local authorities in the infested area, and the campaign against the pests, has been very well organized in most military fashion, even the school teachers and pupils joining in the work with bankers, merchants and volunteers.

The Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture has purchased 50,000 gallons of molasses, 90 tons of arsenic, 1,000 tons of bran and two carloads of lemons, most of which has reached Regina. Large quantities have already been transported to the needy spots and the cost is being borne largely by the municipalities and the Saskatchewan Government in equal shares. In case a municipality refuses to use the bait, there is legislation already passed to employ others to poison the locusts and the cost is charged to the local account.

Unless a good battle is waged it is probable that in two weeks' time the two varieties of the pest most dangerous may get ahead; these are red legged locusts and the clear winged locusts, now beginning to be hatched.

In Manitoba the locusts are reported in Melitat district in millions and the provincial authorities are also ready to cope with the danger. The hot days have caused concern but there is no need for panic and the hungry state of the hoppers leads the Government to think that, as in the State of Kansas, early vigilance will defeat the danger. No effort is being spared in any of the provinces to deal with the situation.

Mud-Jets as Fire Extinguishers.

The efficacy of the mud-jet has long been recognized in connection with the extinguishing of fires in colliery workings, but so far the method of applying and operating such jets has been far from efficient or scientific. One of the chief reasons for the success with which the mud-jet usually operates is that it not only extinguishes the fire by means of its water content, but it cements all loose particles together and forms a cake over the gas-emitting openings, excluding the air and so making the mass safe for the future. Investigations have been made recently into the scientific side of mud-jet working, and it has been decided that the material of the mud, some of which should be of a lime and some of a clay character, should consist of sifted earth of five mm. mesh, boiler ash; dust from the cleaning of blast-furnace gas, and even combustible material, such as the refuse of coal washing, can be added to make up bulk without any risk should nothing more suitable be at hand. In the majority of instances the mud tank can be so placed as to operate by gravity, but steam or compressed air pressure can be used.

OTHER TABLETS NOT ASPIRIN AT ALL

Only Tablets with "Bayer Cross" are Genuine Aspirin

BAYER

If you don't see the "Bayer Cross" on the tablets, you are not getting Aspirin—only an acid imitation.

The "Bayer Cross" is your only way of knowing that you are getting genuine Aspirin, prescribed by physicians for over nineteen years and proved safe by millions for Headache, Neuralgia, Colds, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Neuritis, and for Pain generally. Made in Canada.

Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets—also larger sized "Bayer" packages can be had at drug stores.

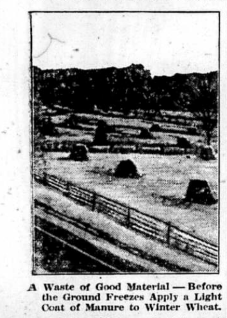
Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada), of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.

While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assist the public against imitations, the Tablets of Bayer Company, Ltd., will be stamped with their general trade mark, the "Bayer Cross."

Fertilize In Winter.

I think manures can be applied cheaper in the winter, as most farmers are not very busy at this time of the year, consequently they should not be so much occupied as in the spring when they should be rushing in their crops.

I think when the manure is applied in the winter it gives the spring rains a chance to soak the decomposed manure into the soil, instead of washing it away, as some writers think, and also helps rot the coarse manure that is left, so by the time the land is ready to work, it does not gather under the plough-beam or clog the cultivator teeth, as it does when applied in the spring.



A Waste of Good Material — Before the Ground Freezes Apply a Light Coat of Manure to Winter Wheat.

I think, and a large part of the best farmers think, that the fresher manure is applied the more valuable it is, for when it is placed in a large heap to rot, part of it will be almost useless by the time all of the heap is rotted.

The reason why some of it is spoiled is this: The large heap generates so much heat that the bottom and middle of the heap is burned until there is very little fertilizing matter left in it.

Manure, properly applied, we all know, is very beneficial to the soil, inasmuch as it supplies much of the lost fertility, but manure can be so applied, as to be an injury instead of a benefit.

Always try to apply your coarse manure to clay soils, as they need something to keep them porous, as well as to fertilize them.

Do not apply coarse manure to loamy soil, as it keeps it too open and it will consequently dry out

For two years we have applied, as soon as the ground froze, a light coat of manure to our winter wheat.

It keeps the snow from being all blown off, leaving it all exposed, and also protects it in the early spring, as well as fertilizing it.

Woman Wants Job.

Miss Mildred Johnson, a student at Oregon Agricultural College, is, so far as the records show, the first woman to make application for civil service examination for the position of grazing assistant in the United States Forest Service. The position is one requiring practical experience in handling stock on the range.

Inbreeding Very Injurious.

Inbreeding of turkeys is very harmful, resulting in loss of vigor and vitality. Therefore, each year a new tom of unrelated blood, but of the same type and species, is necessary. Nothing is gained by cross breeding and much is lost, as it soon reduces purebreds to mongrels.

An apple tree will often produce sufficient bloom for twenty times the number of apples that it could possibly mature.

The Labor Problem.

Only a lack of ships is keeping back hundreds of thousands of prospective European immigrants from flocking to this country. "Even with the post-war passport restrictions, there would be the greatest rush of people to the United States ever known if there were only ships to bring them," asserts an Ellis Island official.

Houdan Fowl Termed Queen.

The Houdan fowl may be termed the queen of the French farmyard. It not only has an elegant carriage and form, and a gay and enticing plumage, but it also has all the practical qualities that one could wish in a fowl. It is a good layer, easy to fatten, and their flesh is of a delicate flavor.

Value of Corncobs In Soil.

While it is true that corncobs are relatively low in plant food, their value must not be computed upon this basis alone, for their value is far greater as organic matter.

There is no question that where cobs can be obtained without cost except the hauling, and the haul is short, that they are worth the hauling to turn under on tight, compact clay soil.

ABOUT SICK POULTRY

A Study of Bacterial Diseases of Chickens.

Diagnosing Tuberculosis, Cholera, Typhoid and White Diarrhoea of Fowl—How to Keep These Troubles From Spreading — Radical Treatment Suggested.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

TUBERCULOSIS—Judging by the number of tubercular birds sent to us for examination from different places we conclude that tuberculosis of domestic poultry is widely spread in Ontario.

In live fowl it is difficult to detect the disease in its early stages. As the disease advances, however, the following symptoms are liable to develop.

1. Emaciation — Notwithstanding the fact that the affected bird's appetite keeps good, the bird will frequently get thin until eventually it becomes little more than skin and bone. This symptom, however, does not always occur; some birds will remain fat even in the advanced stages of the disease, but such birds will be very mopy and inactive.

2. Paleness. — The unfeathered parts of the head, around eyes and mouth, the comb and wattles, become pale and dull, and though the eyes usually remain bright and clear, they lack life and fire and are often closed. The feathers become dry and lack the lustre of health.

3. Listlessness.—Affected birds gradually lose their vigor and become listless and inactive, being inclined to mope around and lie down when not feeding.

4. Lameness.—When the disease attacks the bones and joints lameness occurs.

5. Egg laying is frequently reduced to a minimum.

After death if the bird is opened up tubercles will be found which appear as white or cream colored spots or lumps on liver, spleen, intestines, and may also occur in lungs, bones and other tissues. These tubercles are masses of dead tissue which have been produced by the action of the poison given off by the tubercle bacterium which gets lodged in the tissue wherever a tubercle develops.

The droppings from affected birds have large numbers of these tubercle bacteria in them so that healthy birds scratching and feeding with tubercular birds soon contract the disease from these contaminated droppings.

When once the disease gets established in a flock it is difficult to eradicate except by the most drastic measures. The quickest and most effective method is to kill off all diseased birds and those that have associated with them and then thoroughly clean up and disinfect the premises and start again with new healthy stock.

Fowl Cholera.—Generally the first symptoms of this disease is diarrhoea in which the droppings will be thin and bright yellow mixed with bright green. The feathers get roughened or stand on end, the wings droop, the head is drawn down towards the body. The bird rapidly becomes weak and drowsy. The crop is usually distended with food and apparently paralyzed. The bird becomes very thirsty. In acute cases of the disease the bird dies in from one to two days; in other cases death does not occur for a week or so.

Examination of the dead bird shows inflammation of the digestive organs, kidneys and mesenteries. Hemorrhages are found in the heart; blood vessels of the liver are congested. The ureters appear yellow from the yellow-colored urates which they contain.

The disease is mostly spread by importation of affected birds, birds returning from poultry shows, etc. Occasionally a spontaneous outbreak will occur where no new birds are introduced to a flock. In such cases it is considered that the causal organism was present in the intestines of an apparently healthy bird that was resistant to the disease but that other birds in the flock not being resistant picked up the germs from the droppings of the affected bird and thus contracted the disease.

Every bird showing marked symptoms of the disease should be killed at once and burned, care being taken that none of the blood gets scattered around as the bacteria that cause the disease will be numerous in the blood.

Fowl Typhoid.—This disease is often confused with fowl cholera which it somewhat resembles. Diarrhoea, however, in this disease is very rare. The head of the bird becomes pale, there is a rise in temperature of about three degrees, the bird becomes drowsy and weak and usually dies in from two to ten days. Occasionally a recovery is made.

Post mortem examination shows liver enlarged and congested and sprinkled with small gray spots; intestines pale, contents normal in consistency; heart pale with red spots; lungs normal; blood pale.

This disease is considered to be a filth disease. Prevention is the only known treatment. The maintenance of good sanitary conditions is the best preventive.—D. H. Jones, O. A. College, Guelph.

Live Stock Chat.

Calves of all kinds require plenty of shade.

The horses at hard work will appreciate the run of a paddock where they will be able to pick a bit of grass.

A rest of a few weeks for the brood mare after foaling will benefit both mare and colt.

The bull will give better service if allowed some exercise in a paddock every day.

A Daring Bull Moose.

A huge bull moose chose the grounds of the Royal Ottawa Golf Club as a grazing ground one May morning, and created considerable commotion while members of the club and attendants endeavored to capture him alive. After the attacking force had made several futile attempts to surround him, the great animal, with springing lopes made off for the northern woods. Native red deer have often been seen in this vicinity, but this is the first time on record that a "monarch of the northern woods" has appeared.

From Cherry-Blossom Land

The Japanese Give Good Example

It is a proverb of Cherry Blossom Land that beauty of face and figure depend on womanly health.

What is it that makes our Canadian women often pale, sallow-faced, with dark circles under the eyes, and very often old at forty-five when they should be in their prime?

Women suffer in girlhood from backache, spine-ache and headaches, followed by irregularities and as a result diseases of the womanly organs are more common than any one but a physician in active practice could suppose.

ONTARIO WOMEN TESTIFY

Chatham, Ont.:—"Dr. Pierce's medicines have been used in my family at home (especially by my father and mother) ever since I can remember. They always proved very satisfactory. Through overwork I at one time became all run-down in health, was on the verge of a complete nervous break-down. I went on ailing for about two years, during which time I suffered terribly. I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it soon built me up in good health and cured me of the nervous condition. I consider it an excellent medicine for the ailments of women."—MRS. CHAS. WHEAT AND SOIL.

Conditions Play Big Part In Determining Hardness.

It is well known that, when grown on certain soils, and especially in certain seasons, wheat, instead of being dark and translucent, is pale or spotted with patches of light color. If this condition is very marked the wheat is called "soft," and if it is less evident the term "piebald" is often used, says a recent Experimental Farm Note. There is considerable misapprehension in regard to softness in wheat. Some varieties, such as Prelude for instance, are extra hard in their nature and very seldom produce soft kernels, while others, such as White Russian, are essentially softer. But most of the popular sorts, though usually hard in character, become soft under special conditions of soil and climate. Even the extra hard wheats of the Durum class, such as Wild Goose, sometimes show softness.

Soft kernels of wheat contain a lower proportion of gluten and a higher proportion of starch. The interior of a hard kernel is horny and translucent, while the interior of a soft kernel is whitish and opaque. As bran also is translucent, the soft kernels are paler than the hard ones. The bran itself, however, does not change color when the wheat becomes soft. A soft sample of a so-called red wheat is not yellowish, but pale reddish-brown. The popular idea that Red Rife wheat turns into White Fife when it becomes soft, is entirely erroneous; the difference between these two varieties lies only in the color of the bran. White Fife is just as hard a wheat as Red Fife, though of a different color; yellowish rather than reddish.

Softness is the outcome of peculiar soil conditions, especially in regard to soil structure and the quantity of moisture present. Land from which trees have recently been cleared is particularly liable to produce soft wheat. It is also well established that in countries where the summer is rather long and where the temperatures are moderate the wheat is usually softer than in districts where the summer is short and where great extremes of temperatures occur.

Not very much is yet known as to the best way to overcome the tendency of any soil to produce soft wheat. To a certain extent this is doubtless beyond control, but it appears probable that cultivation, and especially the ploughing under, of sod will, in time, tend to bring about such a condition of soil as will produce harder wheat. This could be expected, particularly if the land under tillage were formerly covered with trees.—C. E. Saunders, Dominion Cerealist.

May Use Sweet Clover.

"Prices for sweet clover seed in Ontario this fall will depend on whether this variety of fodder can meet the requirements of the West," stated T. G. Raynor of the Dominion Seed Branch to the writer. This authority pointed out that sweet clover growing was yet in the experimental stages on the prairies, but if found suitable would be established commercially in a few years. "I would not be surprised to hear of a demand for seed from that source next season," he said, "but, of course, it will be limited. However, rest assured if this feed meets pasturing needs of the West, there will be a good market there for at least the next five years."

Mr. Raynor claims that the prospects for seed from all clovers at present, taking the province as a whole, is much brighter than at this time last year. "In Western Ontario, with a fair amount of rain, there should be a good crop, but down east, especially around Ottawa and the St. Lawrence Valley, there will be little red clover harvested this season either for seed or hay.

"Sweet clover and alfalfa, on the other hand," continued Mr. Raynor, "are looking in good condition all over Ontario. Their long roots have allowed them to survive the spring drought in better shape than the red variety. Sweet clover, owing to its comparative cheapness, its drought-resisting qualities, and to its pasturing possibilities, has seriously threatened the popularity of red clover. I do not think it will ever displace alfalfa, however, especially in a locality where the latter plant will grow readily, but its greater adaptability to a rotation on account of it being a biennial, partly offsets the superior feeding qualities of the plant from Arabia."

Coal In British Columbia.

In the southeastern corner of British Columbia there are more than 1,000,000 acres of proven coal lands, carrying thousands of millions of tons, in which the percentage of high-grade coal is remarkably high.

FRENCH NOTE IN SPORTS CLOTHES

Foreign Influence is Felt More Strongly in America Than Ever Before.

MANY NOVEL FEATURES USED

Large Pockets, Trimmings, Panels, Strappings, Woven Plaids and Stripes and Other Ideas Are in Evidence.

Of all games tennis is the favorite with the French women, who take any amount of trouble in procuring smart clothes for their games, writes a Paris fashion correspondent. The French woman's conception of sports dress, however, is somewhat different from that of the American or English woman. The clothes she wears on the tennis court are, judged by our standard, somewhat fussy, but unless one is of a distinctly athletic type these clothes are infinitely more becoming than those of the more severe and mannish cut to which we have been accustomed. We in this country are beginning to realize this; consequently the French influence is now felt more strongly in our own sports clothes than ever before.

A blouse developed in blue serge, with brown leather lacings, is cut so as to fall in loose, baggy folds, thus giving freedom of movement. While this model made its initial appearance on the Riviera, it appeared later in the showing of Madeleine et Madeleine. It has been copied with many variations in one instance being developed from serge, with stripes embroidered in silk threads. It is made of this latter material both with and without the lacings. When the lacing is used, a black patent leather belt, inlaid with brown motifs, finishes the waistline.

Interest in Skirts.

In skirts for sports wear great interest is manifested in models of decided design, showing big pockets, trimmings, panels, strappings and other features. The use of novelty materials adds to the extreme look, woven plaids and stripes in high colors being combined with plain fabrics in contrast or in harmony to work out the most eccentric of the new styles.

A skirt of fawn-colored serge has huge square patches of checked burella on either side, and in these squares pockets are inserted. The skirt is made to wrap about the body at the top, closing in a crisscross fashion by means of tabs and large buttons. From the lower tab to the hem the skirt is cut away in a diagonal line. In other words, it has a one-side closing which laps far across the front at the top. A glimpse of the plaid shows at the hem in the form of pantalette cuffs attached to a full length panel of the plaid. These new skirts are quite different from the plaited sport skirts of wool that we have been wearing. The remarkable trimmings of gay colored cloths bring a bright note into them.

Front Panel That Disappears.

Another skirt, developed in blue serge, has trimmings of yellow, blue and green plaid in the form of saddle pockets and a disappearing front panel. In this model the method of closing the front is reversed, the overlap being at the hem and the cloth cut away in a diagonal line to reveal the plaid cloth panel at the top only. This panel, however, extends the full length of the skirt, and attached to the bottom of it are straps which button around the legs. These are entirely invisible except when the skirt is blown about. This, while sounding rather extreme, is really a capital idea in a sport garment. It is most interesting to note the increased popularity of the pantalette cuff and divided skirt. Practically every important maker has included some phase of the divided skirt idea in the spring models.

Collarless Blouse, Red-Bound Edges.

A dress which embodies this idea is a simple serge frock in leather brown with straight hanging side panels piped in bright red and buttoned on to the baggy trouser skirt. Here, too, the low hanging blouse fullness appears, and on the puffy bodice a trimming similar to that used on the skirt is placed across the front where the lower half buttons to the yoke. This blouse is collarless and all the edges are bound with red.

To the Spanish influence we may attribute the lavish use of leather, not only for trimmings, but for entire garments as well. One French firm shows a dark leather coat lined with bright red duvetyn. Lanvin makes very smart straight box coats of leather that are without fastenings of any sort.

Then there are bright colored leather vests in ever so many of the dark cloth suits for spring. But perhaps the most interesting use of leather is its application in wide bands to the English traveling and sport coats of bright plaid worsteds.

"Peach Rose" Color.

A color which has created quite a furor in Paris recently is of a yellowish pink in tone and called "peach rose." It is equally becoming to blond and brunet, and this reason alone will tend to make it a popular shade for summer gowns.

Fragrance.

The one who likes a faint suggestion of perfume about her clothes may achieve it by pouring a few drops of toilet water in the rinse water or the starch or by sprinkling orris root or sachet powder under the ironing sheet.

The New Jabot.

Very full jabots of plaited lace are set in open coat fronts instead of flat waistcoats this spring. Some of these frilly lace jabots are creamy in tone, others are pure white. Almost always at the top of the jab is a smart little tailored bow or ribbon which makes a background for a handsome bar pin.

WANT CLOSER RELATIONS.

British Honduras Anxious to Develop Trade With Canada.

The recent meeting of the Associated Chambers of Commerce has done, at least, one good thing. It has got together a band of intelligent men of West Indian tradition who to-day realize more than ever that if the posterity of the British Empire is going to be kept together in the Western World it is going to be done by the united effort on the part of the inhabitants of those possessions whose residence can justly claim the fatherhood of Great Britain. It is not so much, perhaps, significant of this colony, because British Honduras so far as we can observe, has been a place where exploitation has been long going on, with a result that monuments which should have been built up in our midst are to-day built up elsewhere. This colony knows no settler, for industrial establishment has never been the order of the day. Men have come, and gone, leaving nothing behind them except those things which have considerably helped to increase dissatisfaction. They have taken away blessings and self-congratulation. Yet, who to-day can deny that we are British and intend to remain British so long as there is a drop of blood left in our veins, and it is up to those with that atom left to see that British tradition prevails; if that atom can be found in any one let us once and for all, declare we no longer belong to that Empire which cannot serve us best. Such is the spirit, so far as we can see, pervading the minds of those men who have recently been deliberating over the possibilities of the great British West Indies.

We have, in the columns of this paper, during the last fifteen months gone considerably over the ground of giving preference to Canada. Not because we are of the opinion that at the present time we shall benefit from a political alliance, but rather are we convinced that Canada, being situate in the Western world, can take as much interest in us as can any one else. In other words, Canada can help Great Britain by assisting the West Indies. The West Indies can support Great Britain by commercially co-operating with Canada. And why should it not be brought about? If the British Government will succour her dominions and colonies self-centred interests as mentioned above will not prevail.

Why should we in British Honduras foster confederation of the British Empire? The British West Indies (including British Honduras) export every year $66,000,000 worth of tropical products. Of these $22,000,000 worth are exported to Canada. But Canada's total imports of such products amount to more than double the total exports of the West Indies. Some of those go through foreign countries, but the bulk of them go through American brokerage houses. All should and could go direct from the West Indies. The fear, undoubtedly, in the West Indies (it prevails here) is that if trade relationship with Canada increases it will imperil the market for their exports into the United States. Supposing it did? Canada has a market for it all. Of what value are the wonderful resources of the Empire if no effort is made to utilize them for the good of the Empire? The action of the Imperial Government in granting Imperial preference is a good step, and certainly opens up a question for the consideration of the dominions, various islands and colonies within the British Empire. If the Home Government does not want this colony to participate in that preference, the best thing she can do is to say so, for without doubt British Honduras can provide a market for a greatly increased quantity of Canadian agricultural produce and manufactured articles which at the present time are being supplied from the United States. At all events steamship communication will do it, if we can only get it. Let us all work for a United British America.—The Clarion (Belize, British Honduras).

The Men Again.

After starting for his work the other morning Taylor happened to think of something he had forgotten, and returned to the house to get it;

While walking about the kitchen he heard a great racket upstairs. Considerably alarmed, he called:

"What in the world is the matter, Mary? Has anything ahppened?"

There was a moment's silence, then the lady replied:

"Oh, is that you?"

"Yes. Who did you think it was?"

"I heard someone walking about down there, and I thought it was a burglar."

"But the noise—"

"I was making a lot of noise so that he would think there was a man in the house."

At Same Time.

Many a young man has acquired that tired feeling and a rich father-in-law at the same time.

"Surplus" But Superior.

If women are the "surplus" sex, they can take comfort from the fact that they are the superior sex!

If it is charged against women that their brain weighs less than the male brain, the quality of the female brain is much higher than the male.

It has been noted, too, that few great causes succeed unless there is a woman behind them. It was a woman who really roused the conscience of the world against slavery. It was a woman—Florence Nightingale—who roused the world to make warfare humane.

In England it was women—Queen Elizabeth and Queen Victoria — who lifted the prestige and standing of the Empire to higher points than any male ruler.

In paying our thanks for "services rendered" to such great statesmen as Gladstone, Salisbury, and Chamberlain, to mention but three of many, we are really honoring their wives, from whom they drew their inspiration.

A woman—Joan of Arc—saved France from becoming part of Britain, and another woman, Catherine the Great, set Russia high among the nations.

There are more women inventors than men, and more female teachers than male.

It is admitted that women have far greater moral courage than men, and it is a very moot point as to whether they have not greater physical courage.

On the stage, and in the world of song, women reign supreme. And let it be remembered that women stood nearest to the cross on Calvary, and were first at the open tomb on Easter morn.

A healthy body means healthy arteries. The railways are the arteries of Canada.

IN the operation of railways Canadians hold high reputations.

The chief Canadian systems are operated over great stretches of territory presenting widely different problems.

Their traffic obligations fluctuate rapidly with the seasons.

Climatic conditions are sometimes difficult. Unusual foresight, skill and determination are called for.

* * *

Yet the only unfailing highways for the heavy traffic across the New World from China to France during the war—were Canadian railways.

Canada alone among the allied countries had no war-time transportation crisis. When foreign roads choked under their load, she relieved them of millions of tons. At a time when ships were the need of the hour no ship lost time in any Canadian port through failure of the railways to deliver cargoes at the docks.

To-day the Canadian producer still commands the fastest, the most dependable and the cheapest railway service in the world.

But the foresight that made this record possible could do nothing without MONEY! The skill that kept terminals uncongested had to be backed with MONEY! The determination that drove crippled engines ahead in the face of 40-below gales and mounting snow would in the long run have been useless without MONEY!

* * *

Thus to-day the alarming fall in the net revenues of the railways is a menace to railway efficiency. It injures railway credit. It dissolves the reserves needful to meet the expanding needs of a growing country. It imperils national prosperity.

Increased freight rates are imperative therefore, not merely on behalf of railways but in the interests of Canada itself!

In July 1918 the Canadian roads were threatened with a general strike. To prevent this public catastrophe they agreed to follow the American scale of wage increases. The Government of Canada meantime allowed freight rate increases intended to make up the cost of these new wage rates.

Leaving aside all question of increased cost of material, the new wages cost the railways of Canada an extra eighty million dollars for the first year alone.

The new rates yielded them an additional forty-three millions!

The annual deficit on wages alone was thirty-seven millions and is constantly growing!

A newspaper is in no sense a child of charity. It earns twice over every dollar it receives, and it is second to no enterprise in contributing to the upbuilding of a community. Its patrons reap far more benefits from its pages than its publishers, and in calling for the support of the community in which it is published it asks for no more than in all fairness belongs to it though generally it receives less.

STARTERS FOR HUMAN AUTO

All rules of success overlook the most essential element—getting started; therefore, use a self-starter on your human automobile.

Use the brakes of patience and self-control.

Put large quantities of hope in the grease cups.

Use the perseverance brand of gasoline as motive power instead of hot air.

Have the primer properly set—early.

Have the carburetor properly adjusted, admitting a mixture of equal parts of earnestness and will power.

Use the primer of enthusiasm.

Best results can be had by using the four cylinders of knowledge.

The knowledge of self.

The knowledge of company.

The knowledge of your goods.

The knowledge of men.

Advance the sparker of ambition for more speed.

Open wide the throttle of faith in yourself, your company, and your calling—to secure more power.

Polish with powder of courtesy.

Use stick-to-it tires on non-discouragement rims.

Use the golden rule steering wheel.

Put on searchlights of character.

With the foregoing equipment the human automobile will take every hill of disappointment and discouragement on high gear.
